A building on the outskirts of Porto Ferrajo was bombed by an Austrian submarine which was driven off by the coast batteries before much damage was done.

Porto Ferrajo is the capital of the island of Elba, and if the Austrian submarine started from the Austrian base at Porto it must have been completely circumnavigated Italy to reach its objective. The villa occupied by Napoleon during his exile to Elba stands on a height overlooking Porto Ferrajo.

ITALIANS GIVE UP UPPER BASIN OF POSINA RIVER

Forces Are Concentrated in the Arsiero Valley — Fighting Continues Along the Area.

ROME, May 25.—The official bulletin issued last night by the War Department indicates that the defense line of the Italians is still on the Austrian base in the Lagarina Valley, where attempts of the Austrian to capture the village of Marco, about 15 miles south of Rovereto, have failed.

In the Arsiero Valley, on the direct route to Vicenza, the Austrians and Italians are fighting on the frontier line. Between this point and the Adige River the Italians have withdrawn from the upper basin of the Posina River, which comprises part of the Terragnolo Valley, and have concentrated in the Arsiero basin which descends to Schio and Vicenza.

The Austrian offensive along the Italian front, which began ten days ago, assuming more and more the character of the German offensive at Verdun. After having occupied the advanced positions from which the Italians withdrew, the Austrians now are strengthening and organizing themselves there. They have concentrated additional artillery, under command of Gen. Koevess, and have been attempting, but without success, to cut the Italians' rear communications for supplies. This advance of the Austrians has been rendered more difficult by the destruction of bridges and roads.

Italian officers estimate that between the Adige and Brenta Rivers the Austrians have placed 26 batteries of guns of 12-inch, and many other batteries of smaller guns, and have brought from the Galician and Balkan front fresh troops to the number of 18 divisions, or 360,000 men.

Arsiero is one of the towns that has suffered most severely from the bombardment.

Insanity Plea for Waite Begun; He Will Testify

shared the "studio" for "not quite two weeks," and that they "spent about one hour a day there."

"Did Waite ever say anything to you about his father-in-law, John E. Peck?"

"He said his father-in-law was very ill. That was all. He seldom spoke about his family to me."

After Peck's death, Mrs. Horton declared Waite sent her a telegram in which he urged her to "go on with her studies."

Later he wired to her from Grand Rapids advising her to pack their belongings and move from the "studio" apartment.

Returned to New York.

When he returned to New York and after he had been apprised that he was suspected of the murder of Mr. Peck, Waite met Mrs. Horton, she asserted, and complained of not being able to sleep. He gave her some money and requested her to go to a drug store and buy some tablets for him. She was at "school" at the time, taking a "German lesson," she excused herself and did as Waite requested.

"What did Waite say when you gave him the tablets?" "He would never see me again."

"Did you cry?" "Yes, I did."

"Did he kiss you good-by?" "No."

"Why?" "I told him to let him."

Mrs. Horton said that was the last she saw of Waite before his arrest. He gave her a ring and $1170 in cash, she said.

Mrs. Horton told of receiving other letters from Waite after his arrest. In one she said Waite wrote about "the man from Egypt," which she described after his arrest as the evil influence working within him.

"Did you reply to Waite's letters?" was asked. "Yes."

"What did you say?"

"I said something about waiting four or five days. I think."

On cross-examination, Mrs. Horton told Waite's counsel she not only had begged to be allowed to see the prisoner, but that soon she would be making considerable money from her art, and she gladly would use it to aid Waite.

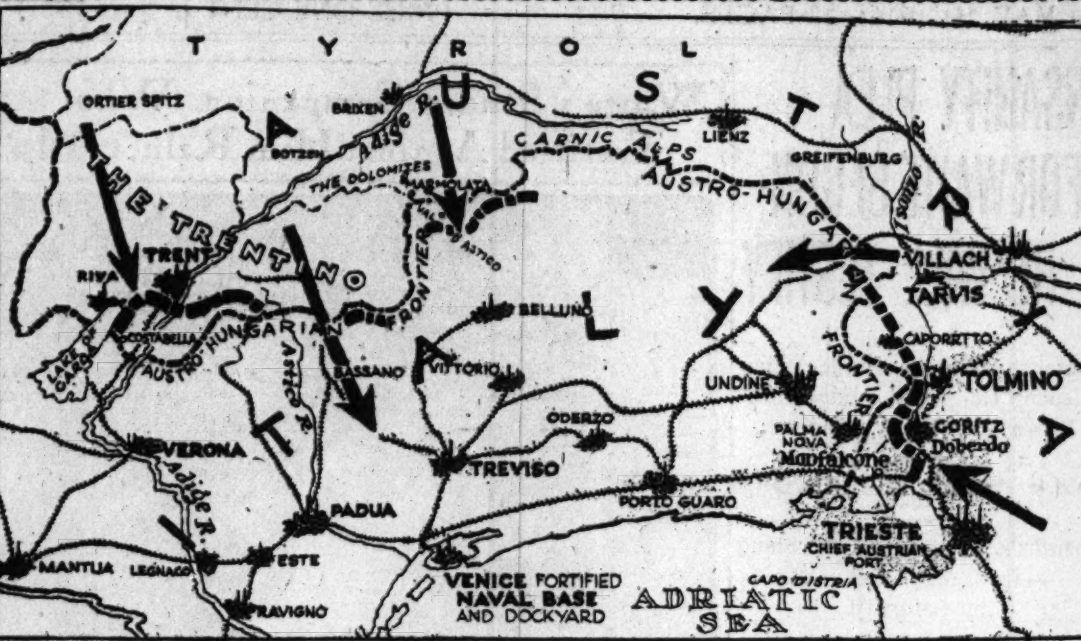

Asked what she had done with the letters she received from Waite immediately following his arrest when he was confined at Bellevue Hospital, Mrs. Horton said she had destroyed them. However, she admitted showing the letters to her "only woman friend."

"What was the purpose of this?"

"Was it to show your deep, lasting affection for the defendant?"

"Yes."

Map Showing How Austria's Great Drive in the Tyrol Is Menacing Italy's Main Army

The center of the offensive is near Lake Garda. If the drive there should be successful it is entirely possible that the Italians may be rolled back from the Tyrol, extending the Austrian Trentino through to the Adriatic.

your last visit that Waite had told you he 'didn't' didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Had you mentioned that to the District Attorney in any of your former visits?"

"No."

On cross-examination Mr. Deuel asked Mrs. Horton:

"Your relations with the defendant were purely platonic, were they not?"

"They were," answered the witness.

"When did you go to the apartment with the defendant?"

"Usually between 4 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon."

"What was his demeanor?"

"He was always a gentleman, and kind."

"Did he ever appear to be melancholy?"

"No, when I played or sang."

"Describe his actions."

"Why, he would cry like a child."

"At other times how did he act?"

"Very boyish. He was always bright and cheerful."

"Did he ever comment to you on his feeling with respect to his actions when you were playing the piano or singing?"

"Yes, he often said we were only children."

"Did the defendant ever ask you to go away with him?"

"No—never."

"What did the defendant tell you he did for a living?"

"Why, he said he was doing research work for Dr. Muller."

Dr. Muller had testified that Waite obtained through him a quantity of arsenic shortly before Mr. Peck's death. Waite told him, she said, that he wanted the poison to "kill some cats."

Previously Waite had said he was interested in the study of bacteriology and Dr. Muller had recommended a former instructor of his. Waite already had confessed that he inoculated the aged Mrs. Peck with deadly disease germs, from which she died a few weeks before her husband.

When Mrs. Horton was excused from the stand Mr. Deuel asked the court to instruct the jury to disregard all testimony about Waite's study of bacteriology. The court so instructed the jury.

Mrs. Waite began her testimony by telling of her father's visit from Grand Rapids to New York and said that Waite suggested that Dr. Albertus A. Moore be called to see her father.

"We—that is, father, Dr. Waite and myself—had planned to go to Hot Springs on a visit. Father appeared to be in very good health."

Some time after her father's arrival in New York, she said, he developed fainting spells. Waite already had admitted that he inoculated him as well as Mrs. Peck with disease germs. The witness told of an occurrence at dinner three days before Peck's death, when Waite served her father with some oysters and later he remarked that the parent felt unusually drowsy. When asked if she noticed anything unusual in Waite's manner, Mrs. Waite broke down and sobbed, but finally replied: "No, only what my maid told me later."

She said her father's condition grew gradually worse and she called in Dr. Moore several times.

Mrs. Waite in continuing her testimony said her husband went out on "calls" at all times of the day and night. The night before her father died, she said, Waite gave him an egg-nogg, and Peck complained that it made him ill. Next morning her father was dead.

Mrs. Waite temporarily gave place on the stand to Harry Ladenheim, a nurse at Bellevue Hospital, who testified that when Dr. Waite was in that institution recovering from the drugs he took, he repeatedly called for his wife and said: "Poor Clara, I hope she does not find out about the other woman." Mrs. Waite, who was then recalled, said Waite slept on the sofa in the parlor the night before her father died and awakened her to tell her of his death.

When Dr. Waite suggested that the body be cremated, she telephoned Dr. Cornell, who advised against cremation. After the body was removed to Grand Rapids Waite was very anxious to know whether an autopsy had been ordered, said the witness.

Had Wife Make Will.

Mrs. Waite asserted that on the night when she and Waite arrived in Grand Rapids, Waite suggested that he would go to Detroit with Peck's body and have it cremated "so as to relieve her mind."

Waite told his wife, she testified, that he wished to put a "tonic" in Mr. Peck's soup. Previously she swore Waite prepared medicine with which she sprayed Mr. Peck's throat.

Mrs. Hardwick testified that she lived in the home of her uncle, Dr. Jacob Cornell of Somerville, N. J., who testified yesterday that he called at the Waite home the day Peck died. She testified that she sent the telegram to Percy Peck giving warning that there might have been foul play in the death of John E. Peck, after Dr. Cornell returned from the Waite apartment, and that someone told her to send it. A question as to who directed her was ruled out. She was then excused.

John Cuniff, a special officer attached to the District Attorney's office, recalled to the stand, identified several medical books found in Waite's apartment. One of them, he said, had been marked at a passage dealing with arsenic poisoning.

Dr. Perry Schurtz of Grand Rapids, Mich., who said he made the autopsy on Peck's body in Grand Rapids, corroborated the testimony of other physicians as to the presence of arsenic in the body and declared it undoubtedly had caused death.

John E. Peck, testified that on Feb. 10 last Dr. Waite told him that his father was getting along in years and that Waite would not be surprised if he lived only a short time. Peck died March 12.

The witness said that, immediately after Peck's funeral, Dr. Waite asked if his wife, Clara Peck Waite, could obtain the use of her share of the Peck estate before the will was probated.

Estate Worth $1,000,000.

Percy Peck declared his father's estate was worth $1,000,000. The witness also told of Waite's courtship of his sister. His mother entirely approved of the marriage, but his father did not.

"My father arranged to give my sister $200 per month at the time of the wedding," he continued, "to be used for her and her husband in living expenses."

On one occasion Peck sent to Mrs. Waite a check for $200 instead of $300, the son said, and Waite sent the check back with a letter in which he wrote that "he was able to take care of his wife himself."

Later Peck sent a check for $300.

A letter written by Waite to Mrs. John E. Peck in October in 1915 concerning "father's financial obligations to Clara" was introduced. In it Waite admitted that while Clara expected a substantial settlement from her father at the time of her marriage, there was no reproach on his part, because he was able to care for his wife.

WIDOW ENDS LIFE; LEAVES INSTRUCTIONS FOR FUNERAL

Mrs. Mary Klugesherz, who's Husband Died Recently, Asks That His Image Be Engraved on Tombstone.

Mrs. Mary Klugesherz, a widow, 35 years old, of 1015 Rutgers street, ended her life with gas yesterday afternoon after preparing her shroud, writing an epitaph for her tombstone and penning a sealed letter, evidently her will, with instructions that it was not to be opened for eight days after her death.

Mrs. Klugesherz's husband, John Klugesherz, died May 15, and the widow requested that the image of his face be engraved on her tombstone. She also requested that the image of a dove be engraved on the tombstone, and that the inscription be: "In prayer and above the inscription, 'Now we are at last together.'"

After directing that her grave and that of her husband be covered with evergreen, that she be buried with her high shoes on, and declaring that the dress House to wear was lying on the table in the front room, Mrs. Klugesherz wrote that she had $4.50 in her purse, a receipt for $1300 that she had paid on her home and two bank books.

She was found on the kitchen floor with the burners of the gas range open.

CYRENAICA BUT DUSTY MEMORY OF PAST GLORY

Italian Raid on Austrian Submarine Bases on Its Coast Recalls Its Existence.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The reported successful raid of an Italian fleet on the secret submarine bases established by Austria just west of Egypt brings to the attention of the world an almost forgotten province which was once dotted with magnificent cities of culture and wealth. Concerning this region, known in ancient times as Cyrenaica, and corresponding very closely to the modern province of Barca, between Tripoli and Egypt, the National Geographical Society, from its headquarters in Washington, has issued the following bulletin:

"Cyrenaica, whose dangerous coast line devoid of good harbors, is said to have furnished excellent places of concealment for stores of food and fuel needed by Austrian submarines operating in the southeastern end of the Mediterranean, was once the seat of culture of one of the most prosperous Greek colonies of the South. Today this territory, with an area equal to that of Scotland, supports a population of only 250,000 men, many of whom are nomads."

"Cyrene, capital of the ancient province, is reputed to have been settled by Battus, who seeking to avoid political strife in the island of Rhodes, he chose the site in accordance with a suggestion from the oracle of Delphi, which commended a place 'between waters.' Four springs, which furnished an abundance of pure water, on a prominence 10 miles from the sea shore, was construed to fit this description, after an earlier choice of a barren island had proved unhappy."

"The town took its name from that of a wood nymph who is supposed to have lived in the vicinity. On the slopes of verdant hills where today numerous herds of nomads find unsurpassed pasturage."

"For more than 800 years after its settlement by Battus, Cyrene flourished, but gradually its commerce began to wane under the sway of the Ptolemys, much of its trade being diverted to Alexandria and Carthage. Finally the whole province was bequeathed to Rome by Ptolemy Apion in 96 B. C., and it remained a province of that empire until the Arab invasion of the seventh century."

"As early as the fourth century, however, historians employed the phrase 'deserted towns' in writing of Cyrene and others of the five cities which originally gave the name of Pentapolis to the region."

"On these well wooded, amply watered shores of the Mediterranean there was cultivated a variety of barley much prized by the ancients, while fruits and flowers still grow here in great luxuriance, almost on the fringe of the Libyan desert. One of the most famous products of Greek Cyrenaica was the aliphium plant, whose reputed marvelous medicinal properties made it a most valuable article of export. No plant grown in this part of the world today has properties of a nature so remarkable as to identify it as aliphium. Its cultivation, therefore, may be regarded as one of the 'lost arts.'"

Cyrenic School Founded.

"Among Cyrene's native sons whose names add lustre to the history of the ancient city are Callimachus, the poet, and Aristippus, a pupil of Socrates, who founded the Greek school of philosophy known as Cyrenaic. The Cyrenic school, a forerunner of Epicureanism, held that pleasure is the highest good, and that virtue is that course of conduct which is productive of the greatest enjoyment."

"Owing to the anti-Christian activities of the powerful and populous Jewish sect, Cyrene was the scene of the ruins of Cyrene and her neighbor cities has not been pursued with great thoroughness. In fact, Turkish tombs have, as far as possible, been removed, and the ruins of this section of the Ottoman domain."

"About 12 years ago the site of the ancient city was visited by a venturesome party of Englishmen, who made a hurried excursion, spending a single night amid the dust heaps of departed grandeur, where the only structures that defied the ravages of time are the great tiers of rock tombs. Playing about the lofty and Doric columns which mark the impressive entrances to these last abodes of the sepulchred great, the visitors found a school of departed nomad families, sole inheritors of a city of 100,000 inhabitants."

AUSTRIAN ADVANCE IMPERILS VENICE AND A BIG ARMY

American Army Officer Discusses Possibilities of Offensive in South Tyrol.

ITALY MADE MISTAKE

Underestimated Enemies Strength and Thought Campaign Would Be Easy One.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Army officers who have been watching with interest the offensive of the Austrian army against Italy in the southern Tyrol, say that Italy has suffered seriously. A military authority today outlined the Austrian campaign for the Post-Dispatch. He said:

"The Austrian Commander in Chief chose the most vital point for his offensive. The southern Tyrol always was the best point for such a movement. The wonder is that the Italian commander permitted his line to become so weakened in the Lake Garda region that it could be rolled back for miles by the oncoming Austrians."

"Should the offensive accomplish its purpose in the southern Tyrol, a great military coup will have been achieved. A glance at the map will show that the center of the offensive is near Lake Garda, which is at the southernmost point of the neck of Italy that reaches into Austria, at the head of the Adriatic sea."

"The great Gorizia offensive of the Italians was on the other side of this neck in Italy. Complete success for the Austrians in this offensive, therefore, would mean that the Italian army must be withdrawn from Udine-Trent line or that the main army would be bottled up in a comparatively small area, subject to attack by Austria on all sides."

Italy's Campaign Local.

"As a matter of fact, Italy has been conducting a sort of local campaign. She had done little or nothing of value for her allies, except to have kept the Austrian army engaged. The value of this is greatly reduced, when one recalls that Austria was distrustful of Italy from the first and maintained an army within easy reach of the border."

"In the present Austrian offensive history is merely repeating itself. Here, too, the Italians have shown considerable less moral strength than the Austrians in the wars which have occurred. Press reports indicate that the Austrians have advanced far beyond the advanced line and have recaptured in one week what it required Italy a year to conquer in the Trentino."

"If it is true as reported from Berlin and Vienna, that the Italians are being steadily rolled back, it probably means that the process will continue for some time, since no permanent defensive lines appear to have been laid further back."

"Italy apparently went into the war against Austria with the idea that the time had come to strike an ancient enemy, when Austria had her hands full elsewhere. The strength of Austria was discounted. This lack of foresight now promises to cost the Italian commander dearly."

"There was some talk of an Italian army to aid the British and French campaign of the central Powers, but both Serbia and Montenegro had been defeated before a wheel was turned at Rome. If any troops from Italy crossed the Adriatic it was for the purpose of seizing the port of Avion, the best on the eastern coast, in the hope of holding it permanently and not to assist the retreating Serbians and Montenegrins."

No Help for Italy Likely.

"For this reason it will be surprising if the allies attempt to station at any point for the purpose of relieving pressure on Italy."

"It is not beyond the realm of possibility that Austria may roll the Italian forces out of the Northern Tyrol, which would have the effect of extending the Austrian Trentino through to the Adriatic Sea."

"Venice might fall into Austrian hands if they have a sufficient force to throw a strong line all the way across this relatively narrow neck of Italian territory."

"If it is true, as reported in press dispatches, that the Austrians have placed 100 heavy guns to the mile along a front of 30 miles there can be no doubt that Francis-Joseph and his military chiefs are determined to add further Italian territory to the Austrian empire, as well as relieve prospective pressure on the Goritz front."

CARRANZA SAID TO BE TAKING PROPERTY OF MADERO FAMILY

Confiscation Attributed to Adherence of Former President's Kinmen to Villa.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The Carranza Government has confiscated much of the property belonging to the Madero family, because of the adherence of the Maderos to Villa, according to reports which have reached the United States department through official channels.

The reports were of such a character as to satisfy officials that the de facto authorities from the outset determined to punish Villa adherents by means of confiscating such property as could be shown to belong to them.

Views of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln on Conscription Not Contrary to American Traditions

By Sterling E. Edmunds, Lecturer on International Law, St. Louis University Law School.

THE opinion is quite general that the principle of universal military training is foreign to our political philosophy; that it is antagonistic to the spirit of our peace-loving institutions and that it is primarily a device of aggressive empires for marshaling their whole forces for upholding the doctrine of might.

Tet this principle is not only not in conflict with the fundamentals of our political conceptions, but on the contrary is thoroughly in accord with them.

We have only to consult the three pre-eminent political philosophers of the United States—Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln—to learn how vital the principle of every other nation about military service for the maintenance of our democracy.

The revolutionary period of our history is one in which the obligation of universal military service was realized, although Washington never ceased to complain of the inefficiency of the methods by which the full manpower of the colonies was employed. He complained not only of the lack of discipline of that very large majority of troops who composed the state militia, but also of the pernicious system of individual control, whereby unity of action was so frequently defeated. He declared time and again that "no militia will ever acquire the habits necessary to resist a regular force."

For the real business of fighting is only to be attained by a constant course of discipline and service. The methods of training and discipline in the respective states were generally inadequate and lax, and it is not surprising that many of these organizations left unenviable records for desertion en masse and mutiny. Washington despaired of ever realizing an adequate degree of discipline in the militia in the respective states and very naturally placed his greatest reliance upon regulars.

However, he never lost sight of the military obligation of citizenship and the importance of training, repeatedly urging this in his speeches to Congress.

On Jan. 8, 1790, for example, he said:

"To be prepared for the most effectual means of preserving peace, a free people ought not only to be armed but disciplined; to which end an uniform and well digested plan is requisite."

Again on Dec. 3, 1793, he said to Congress:

"I cannot recommend to your notice measures for the fulfillment of our duty to the rest of the world without again pressing upon you the necessity of placing ourselves in a condition of complete defense and of exacting from the fulfillment of their duties toward us. The United States ought not to be without a standing army."

Washington had more practical experience with the citizen-soldier and saw beyond the mere military obligation, that by training alone could be made effective.

Jefferson, like Washington, was thoroughly imbued with the necessity of being prepared for war, as he wrote to Monroe as early as 1790:

"Whatever enables us to go to war, secures our peace."

He was insistent, however, that the citizen-arm of the Government should under all circumstances remain paramount to the military.

Even Washington had hardly more humiliating experience with untrained volunteers than Lincoln, particularly in the battle of Bull Run. When McDowell's army of 22,000 men was defeated by the 22,000 men of the Confederate army, the result was a crushing blow to the Union army.

President's Mind "to Let" on Subject

"TO use the phrase of a friend of mine, my mind is not let on the subject (compulsory military service). I would say, merely, that that was not contrary to American tradition."—Recent statement of President Wilson.

to indulge a persuasion that, contrary to the order of human events, they will forever keep at a distance those painful appeals to arms with which the history of every other nation about military service for the maintenance of our democracy.

There is a right due to the United States among nations which will be withheld if not absolutely lost by the reputation of weakness. If we desire to secure peace, one of the most powerful instruments of our rising prosperity, it must be known that we are at all times ready for war."

Jefferson conceived even more clearly the vital connection between citizenship and the personal obligation of the citizen to maintain his state by force of arms. In 1814 he wrote to Thomas Cooper:

"The Greeks and Romans had no standing armies, yet they defended themselves. The Greeks by their laws and the Romans by the spirit of their people, took care to put into the hands of their rulers no such engine of oppression as a standing army. Their system was to make every man a soldier and pledge him to repair to the standard of his country whenever that was reared. This made them invincible, and the same remedy will make us so."

He wrote in the same vein to Monroe in 1812, saying:

GIRL FOUND DEAD IN LOCKED ROOM; SUITOR ARRESTED

Cup Partly Filled With Poison Near Body of Aurora (Ill.) Young Woman.

AURORA, Ill., May 25.—Gwendolyn, the 15-year-old daughter of Mrs. Anne Collins, was found dead in her home last night. The mother found the girl's body on a couch in an unused room, the door leading into which had been locked from the outside. On a stand near the body was a cup partly filled with poison.

Mrs. Collins called the police, who later took into custody Jack Armstrong, 19 years old. It is said he had been attentive to Gwendolyn.

all's entire force fled in panic from the field of battle, not stopping until it came within sight of Washington. It was not, as Lincoln well knew, that this force was any less brave than another, but that it had not had the training and discipline through which slow bodies of men acquire the habit of obedience.

When volunteers ceased to respond to Lincoln's call for more troops it became necessary to resort to conscription. In reply to complaints Lincoln repeatedly pointed to the universal obligation which citizens owe to their states and justified compulsory enlistment as the necessary enforcement of this obligation.

Discussing this legislation he wrote in a private memorandum Aug. 15, 1862:

"The principle of the draft, which simply is involuntary or enforced service, is not new. It has been practiced in all ages of the world. It was well known to the framers of our Constitution as one of the modes of raising armies at the time they placed in that instrument the provision that 'The Congress shall have power to raise and support armies.' It had been used just before in establishing our independence, and it was also used under the Constitution in 1812. Wherein is the peculiar hardship now? Shall we shrink from the necessary means to maintain our free government which our grandfathers employed to establish it and our own fathers have already employed once to maintain it? Are we degenerate? Has the manhood of our race run out?"

In this memorandum Lincoln points out that the constitutional power of Congress to raise and support armies is unqualified; that no method is prescribed and that full discretion is reposed in Congress to carry out its power in any way it sees fit.

Under this provision, therefore, Congress possesses authority at any time in its judgment to institute a system of universal military training.

Even Washington had hardly more humiliating experience with untrained volunteers than Lincoln, particularly in the battle of Bull Run. When McDowell's army of 22,000 men was defeated by the 22,000 men of the Confederate army, the result was a crushing blow to the Union army.

COUNTY ROADS TO BE PUT IN SHAPE FOR CONVENTION

Engineer Wants Delegates and Visitors to Get Good Impression of Highways.

LIBERAL USE OF OIL

Work Has Already Been Started on Main Arteries and Will Be Rushed.

Highway Engineer Elbring announced today that special efforts would be made, starting immediately, to have the main roads in St. Louis County in good repair and oiled by the time the Democratic National Convention is convened in St. Louis, June 14.

"We want to arrange for the comfort of the delegates, and thus create the favorable impression that St. Louis County is a good roads center," he said. The temporary annual repaving of roads was started some time ago, he said, and the Olive Street road improvement has been completed. Normally the repair work is not completed by June 15, but this year, Elbring said, it will be rushed.

Work is started. Special attention, Elbring said, will be given to the Clayton road, which leads to the St. Louis Country Club, and to the Gravois road, which leads to Sunset Hill Country Club. Both roads, he said, will be oiled by June 14, with the exception of a few stretches where property owners have refused to contribute to the expense of oiling.

It costs $250 a mile to oil the roads. The county pays $200 a mile, after property owners subscribe $50 a mile. Oil this year is a fraction more than $10 a gallon, an increase of 2 cents a gallon over the cost last year. Oiling of roads has been started, and considerable progress has been made on the Big Bend road.

Bad stretches of roads, Elbring said, will be resurfaced by filling in with rock or gravel and then spreading screened gravel over the roadway. The roads are then rolled and oiled, making an ideal auto roadway.

Work on Clayton Road. William Buermann, Associate Judge of the County Court, told a reporter that he would personally see that the Clayton road, which is in his district, is repaired before the Democratic convention. He said that it was in bad condition from the city limits out, and especially had just west of Eusch's Grove, which is the stretch of road just east of the St. Louis Country Club.

George P. Rott, Associate Judge of the County Court from the district which includes the Gravois road, promised to see that Gravois road received its temporary repair in time for its use by convention delegates.

The road repairs are under the direction of 48 Road Overseers, each of whom has one or more men working every day.

SUIT PROPOSED TO DECIDE STATUS OF COLLECTOR KOELN

Efficiency Board Wants to Know Whether He Is in State or City Official.

Tom Rogers, chairman of the Efficiency Board, has asked from City Counselor Daves an opinion as to whether the Tax Collector is a State or city official, and therefore subject to the rules of the Efficiency Board. Daves has not made a formal reply, but a friendly suit to decide that he probably will recommend that an opinion be asked of the courts. In that case, Rogers, said today that he will ask Daves to bring a friendly suit to have the matter tested.

Edmond Koeln, the Collector, when he heard of the proposed suit, said that he did not know just what a friendly suit meant, but that he would contest any attempt to have himself and the 100 men in his department made subject to the Efficiency Board. He said the Attorney General has given an opinion that the Collector is a State official and he gives a State bond for $750,000. Koeln recently has been at the head of a faction opposed to Mayor Kiel in many political matters.

William P. McKnight had been in business with his brother for four years prior to Jan. 1, but since that time has been operating his own shop at 601 Pine street. O. F. McKnight asserts his shop had been under the same management for 18 years and that his brother is making the same statement for his own place, which he contends is false.

ST. LOUIS CENSOR OF PUBLIC MORALS

Has Publication Containing Reproductions of Nude Figures Partly Suppressed Here.

7 INSPECTORS UNDER HIM

Chairman of Catholic Society Committee Watches Periodicals for Objectionable Matter.

Edward V. F. Schneiderhahn, lawyer and former Councilman, whose activities as a voluntary moral censor in St. Louis have brought him before the public on many occasions, is attempting to exercise a censorship over the sale in St. Louis of several widely read monthly magazines.

Through his efforts several cheaply printed magazines lacking literary value during the past few months have been withdrawn from sale at many news stands. He said they had an immoral tone. This month Schneiderhahn says he has been able to obtain a partial suppression of one popular magazine. He refused this morning to point out to a Post-Dispatch reporter the objectionable features in the publication, but from an examination of the magazine it appears that his complaint might be directed at reproductions of sculptures and paintings of nude figures.

"It is not entirely one issue of a magazine to which objection is found," Schneiderhahn said, "but it is to the policy of the management and the publication month after month of pictures and fiction which convey improper impressions to immature minds."

Refuses to Name Magazines. Schneiderhahn said the reason for refusing to name the magazines which he has objected and his refusal to point out the objectionable features was that to do so would be to advertise these publications.

He said there had been little difficulty in stopping the sale of magazines which were distributed by one news agency, but that several which were distributed by several agencies could not be entirely suppressed in St. Louis.

Schneiderhahn has seven inspectors working under him. He is chairman of the Committee on Public Morals of the St. Louis Branch of the American Federation of Catholic Societies.

He has been actively engaged as a voluntary moral censor in St. Louis for 16 years, but only during the past few years has he systematized the work. When a Councilman, Schneiderhahn called public attention to this work when he was hiting in the Council chamber of an advertising counselor which he branded as suggestive.

He has forced hotels and saloons to remove pictures which he considered immoral. His work has extended to picture post cards, moving picture shows and to public address. A few days ago he succeeded in closing the doors of the Victoria Theater to Mrs. Margaret Sanger, who had engaged the theater for a lecture on birth control.

Censorship on Theaters. When theatrical managers had tried the experiment of displaying barelegged choruses, Schneiderhahn has visited the Prosecuting Attorney next day, and has caused the limbs to be covered. His latest achievement of this kind was in the case of Gertrude Hoffman's "Bubbles" at the Columbia Theater three weeks ago. Miss Hoffman and her troupe were required to drape both their legs and their waists, which had been left bare in harem style.

Where a Jut Is Best. "The regiment in the trenches were mostly Jats of Hissar and Hohotak, and the Colonel told me 'You must get the Jut where he is top-dog in his own country,' he said, 'and not where he lives among folk who think they are his betters. And he is best where the land is poor. In districts where the subdivision of the soil among large families does not leave enough to go round you will get a good recruit.'"

"There are many classes of Jut, and most of them have some peculiar virtue of their own, but quickness of apprehension is not one of them. I have seen a Jut standing in the nick of time, and he said, 'I was the beginning of the afternoon 'strafe'. Still, there was no call for casualties, and one only had to keep one's head down."

Periscope No Charm. "In the middle of a subaltern coming down 'Queer street', I asked him to tell me that one of the Jats was hit. 'Loophole' the Colonel asked. But it was not a loophole. The Jatan had got hold of somebody's periscope; he had heard that it was a charm which enabled you to see without being hit, and he was standing up over the parapet trying to adjust it like a pair of field glasses when a bullet flicked off part of his ear."

"The supply of good Indian officers is becoming very difficult in the Jut regiment, for these children of labor follow better than they lead. But even in the acquisition of understanding it is hard, plugging application that tells. 'Continuing' is the Jut's virtue, or 'carrying on,' as we say; and he will sap through a course of signaling with the same doggedness as he saps up to the enemy's lines. 'We've got some first-class signallers,' the Colonel boasted, 'if they can write their reports in Roman Urdu. And the pick of the lot is Tara. What that youth has seen in France and Mesopotamia would keep old Homer in copy through a dozen Iliads, but it has left no wrinkle on his brow. Tara is still as fresh as paint.'"

"Sahib," he asked, "when may I go to the Turkish saphed with my bomb? He had lost a brother at Sheikh Saad, and wanted to make good."

When court closed yesterday, the ninth day of the trial, but one more man had been tentatively accepted. Four more until the end of the week and sworn. Three other men tentatively accepted by the State were excused by the defense.

SCHNEIDERHANN PUTS CENSORSHIP ON MAGAZINES

Has Publication Containing Reproductions of Nude Figures Partly Suppressed Here.

7 INSPECTORS UNDER HIM

Chairman of Catholic Society Committee Watches Periodicals for Objectionable Matter.

Edward V. F. Schneiderhahn, lawyer and former Councilman, whose activities as a voluntary moral censor in St. Louis have brought him before the public on many occasions, is attempting to exercise a censorship over the sale in St. Louis of several widely read monthly magazines.

Through his efforts several cheaply printed magazines lacking literary value during the past few months have been withdrawn from sale at many news stands. He said they had an immoral tone. This month Schneiderhahn says he has been able to obtain a partial suppression of one popular magazine. He refused this morning to point out to a Post-Dispatch reporter the objectionable features in the publication, but from an examination of the magazine it appears that his complaint might be directed at reproductions of sculptures and paintings of nude figures.

HARBY JAT WITH GOLD IN TEETH A STUBBORN FIGHTER

Carrying Precious Passport to Other World in His Mouth, He Never Flinches.

INDIANS WHO "HOLD ON"

Tara, a Youth, Has Served in France and Mesopotamia; Still 'Fresh as Paint.'

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch. LONDON, May 25.—"I was tawling bully beef and 'tigris' with a Jat regiment in the firing trenches the other day, when the discussion arose as to why the Jat wears gold in his teeth," writes Edmund Candler, a Daily Express correspondent with the English in Mesopotamia. Tara, the bomb hawdler, was sent for, a youth of five years' service, and the quickest intelligence in the regiment.

Tara entered the dugout. "Why do Jats wear gold in their teeth, Tara?" the Colonel asked.

"There is a saying among my people, sahib, that he who wears gold in his teeth must always speak what is true. Gold in the teeth stops the passage of lies."

"I have heard some story about gold helping the Jat to heaven," the Colonel observed. "Gold, Tara explained, was a passport in the other world, as in this, and it was not safe to carry it on the finger or in the ear, where it might be detached, so it was worn in the teeth."

"The Jat is primarily a farmer. He has not the ancient military traditions of the Rajput, Mahratta, or Sikh, though none so stubborn as he to fight for his own hand. He does not figure in history among the adventurers, free-companions, builders of kingdoms, leaders of men, but circumstances have molded him from time to time into a fighting man. Prosperity may soften him, but adversity still stiffens the impression of the mold."

Built Into Fighters. "It was during the reconstitution of the Indian army in 1892 that the Jats were built up again into a fighting race. A good regimental officer can make any man who will out of the Jat. It takes earthquakes and volcanoes to turn a regiment of these hard-bitten men out of the position they have been given to hold."

"A Jat battalion was one of the first of the Indian regiments to be engaged in France. As early as Nov. 16, 1914, they had broken into the German trenches. It was on the 23d of the same month that they made their gallant counter attack over the snow at Festubert, with the Garhwals, and won back the lost trenches. At Richebourg, on Dec. 20, they held their ground against the German waves who were left practically in the air, and they would not let go their hold at Neuve Chapelle when they were enfiladed from the Port Arthur position, still intact, on their right. Two months afterwards, on May 8, they made their frontal attack on the Fort of the double company penetrated the German lines; only seven men returned unscathed. History repeated itself in Mesopotamia. It has been the part of this gallant stock to arrive on the scene in the nick of time, and to be thrown into the brunt of the attack."

Where a Jut Is Best. "The regiment in the trenches were mostly Jats of Hissar and Hohotak, and the Colonel told me 'You must get the Jut where he is top-dog in his own country,' he said, 'and not where he lives among folk who think they are his betters. BONDSMEN TO BE SUED ON $42,000 LE PAGE SHORTAGE

East St. Louis Trustees Won't Wait Longer on Former School Treasurer.

FOUR MEN ARE LIABLE

Audit of Books Completed, Showing Numerous Discrepancies in Accounts.

An audit of the books of Stephen T. Le Page, until recently treasurer of the East St. Louis School District, was completed by E. M. Sorrells, a public accountant, today, shows a shortage of $42,019.40 in Le Page's accounts, according to an official report made to the trustees by Sorrells.

When Le Page admitted the cash shortage several weeks ago he said it amounted to $37,000 and informed the trustees that he had invested the money in real estate. The property, he said, was of sufficient value to reimburse the school fund. Since then Le Page has been unable to raise the necessary cash to meet the shortage.

Silas Cook, counsel for the trustees today said he would not wait longer for Le Page to settle, but would file suit against his bondsman.

Book Discrepancies Found. In auditing the books Sorrells found that Le Page had credited himself with $4172 which he said he had paid out on warrants, but no cancelled warrants covering the amount could be found. Sorrells also discovered

MAN OF 88 KILLS DAUGHTER; SHOTS NEIGHBOR, AND IS SHOT

Also Wounds One of Posses After He Sets Fire to Buildings on His Farm.

IOLA, Kan., May 25.—George Becker, 88 years old, was shot and probably fatally wounded today by a posse of neighbors who pursued him from his farm, where he had killed his daughter, Lena, wounded a neighbor and burned his farm buildings. Before Becker was shot he wounded one of the posse.

An application for the appointment of a guardian for Becker's extensive property holdings caused the trouble. When the aged man learned of the action taken in court by relatives he became enraged at his daughter and killed her with a charge of buckshot. A neighbor of the name of Miles, who attempted to interfere, received injuries which may cause his death.

Becker fled across the prairie after setting fire to almost everything inflammable on his farm. Neighbors were attracted by the blaze, and when they learned what had happened, started in pursuit of the old man. As he was about to be overtaken Becker opened fire on his pursuers, wounding one of them before he was shot down.

INTERNATIONALIZE CLUBS, FEDERATION PRESIDENT SAYS

Mrs. Pennybacker Points Out That After War They Can Aid in "Harmonizing Nations."

By Associated Press.
NEW YORK, May 25.—A step from nationalism to internationalism so that assistance may be rendered in a worldwide movement by women to "harmonize the nations" after the close of the European war, is recommended to the General Federation of Women's Clubs by Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Austin, Tex., in her report, as president, read here today at the thirteenth biennial convention of the Federation.

"While we call ourselves the General Federation of Women's Clubs, yet we may as well face the fact that our foreign clubs are so few and far between that we are in reality only national," Mrs. Pennybacker said. "On the Continent of Europe and in other countries little is known of the Federation, because there the great woman movement is represented by the National Councils of Women all united in the International Council of Women."

"Now, there is only one way in which the Federation can be represented in this International Council, and that is by joining the already long-established National Council of Women in the United States."

"I will confess that there is a deeper reason that makes me so eager to see this brought to pass. When the cruel war is over and peace comes we shall find in the International Council an organization that is ready—ready for harmonizing the nations which are now at war—ready for calling back into wise common counsel women who for so many years were accustomed to work side by side."

Makes Other Recommendations.
Mrs. Pennybacker made other important recommendations, one of which urged that the organization "go on record as favoring a continuance of effort on the lines of improvement of rural life and the Americanization of the immigrant." In this connection the President explained that her administration, having "early felt the need of proper alliance with the Government," had established a system of co-operation with the Departments of Agriculture, Interior and Labor.

"Every club which is willing to aid the Government in Americanizing the immigrant," Mrs. Pennybacker said, "is invited to send the name of its president and secretary to the president of the federation. These names will be filed with the Commissioner of Immigration. When a foreign family lands, destined for a town in which a woman's club exists, if the Commissioner finds on his list that this club has signified its willingness to co-operate, a letter will immediately be sent to the president of the club. It is not money that these people want, but, is that the touch of human sympathy, the assurance that there is a place for them in the community that women know so well how to give."

Another recommendation was that the clubs "study the life and history of Latin-American peoples," that the incoming board suggest definite plans for assisting the development of Pan-American relations. Recalling that the Federation was, by invitation from the Secretary of State, represented at the Pan-American Congress in Washington, Mrs. Pennybacker said:

"Careful study convinces us that ideal relationship between the United States and the other American republics will never be brought about until the women of the countries more thoroughly understand each other."

Takes Up Motion Pictures.
The motion picture was considered in another recommendation, the president asking the convention to request the incoming board to make a survey of the problem and outline a plan of action.

"No question has aroused more interest among the homes of our land," she said. "We realize that this institution has come to stay; that it can be made a great educational force; that no one is really to blame for the state of affairs that now confront us; but we realize also that the average motion picture tends to degrade rather than uplift. Remember, please, I say the average picture. We want the co-operation of the film men and we should take no hasty step."

Mrs. Pennybacker voiced a "warning" of "certain dangers" which she declared confronted the federation. "First, there is the constant temptation for us to be exploited, to be used for commercial purposes," she said, explaining that pleas for financial aid are constantly being received by individual clubs. She urged that the members "listen to no calls save those sanctions by state and national federations," and said she believed that the problem needed special attention in a legislative way.

The "second most serious danger," Mrs. Pennybacker described as "the lack of continuity of effort."

Reviewing her administration, Mrs. Pennybacker, alluded to herself as an "on-the-wing president," explaining that since July, 1914, her duties have taken her 100,000 miles into every state except Wyoming and into England, Ireland, Cuba and Alaska.

GRAND JURY TO TAKE UP BURNS END OF WIRE TAPPING

Detective Accused for "Listening In" on Lawyer's Wire and Opening Office Desk.

MAYOR MITCHEL HISSED

Gives Details of Charges Made Against Priests and Others and Suit Is Threatened.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Fresh legal proceedings, both criminal and civil, were promised today as the outcome of the wire tapping investigations. District Attorney Swann said that Frederick Seymour, an attorney, had consented to sign a complaint which would enable the prosecutor to ask the grand jury for indictments against William J. Burns, detective, for unlawfully entering Seymour's office.

Mayor Mitchell threatened criminal action against prominent clergymen whom he accused of conspiring to pervert justice and interfere with the State investigation of Catholic charitable institutions. One of the men accused by the Mayor, the Rev. Father William B. Farrell, said he intended to sue the Mayor for defamation of character.

The District Attorney sought permission to lay the Burns case before the grand jury after witnesses testified yesterday at John Doe proceedings before a City Magistrate that the detective had had Seymour's wire tapped and even had opened a desk during several secret raids and made notes from papers therein.

It is charged that Burns was employed to find out how tips about war munitions contracts had leaked from the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. Today the District Attorney sought to ascertain whether Burns' employer knew of the methods he used to obtain information and countenanced them.

Burns is on his way to New York from Los Angeles. His arrival is expected Saturday and the District Attorney said he would have a chance to testify at the John Doe proceedings before any action was taken against him. Investigation of police activities in tapping wires to obtain evidence against the Catholic charities authorities continued today before the Thompson Legislative Committee. Since Senator Thompson, the chairman, announced that committee held bound to hear any of the persons mentioned by the Mayor in his sweeping charges, it promised to be prolonged.

Mayor Mitchell succeeded yesterday in putting upon the record of the Thompson Legislative Investigating Committee the reports of the alleged conversations overheard by the police who tapped the telephone wires of Rev. Father Farrell, the Rev. Daniel C. Potter and Dean Potter.

The hearing room was packed to the doors with interested listeners when the Mayor entered.

Hisses for the Mayor. Catcalls and hisses greeted the Mayor's assertion that Alfred Talley, attorney for Father Farrell, and the Pettiers had known what had taken place before the Kings County grand jury, and Talley's rejoinder that all he knew was that the Mayor had escaped indictment by but one vote.

There was excitement when a man in the audience assailed the Mayor as a "little shrimp" and a "disgrace to his church and the community."

Upon the Mayor's command that the policemen in the room should assist the sergeant-at-arms of the committee in maintaining order, the presence of a guard of at least 25 detectives was revealed.

At the close of the hearing the police formed a cordon around the Mayor and escorted him out.

In his testimony Mayor Mitchell reiterated his charge that the telephone wires of Catholic clergymen and others had been tapped before the charities investigation because of the discovery that there was a conspiracy to discredit the city administration and more particularly the Department of Charities headed by John Kingsbury, who was indicted for his part in the wire-tapping activities.

The substance of the conversations revealed by the Mayor related chiefly, apparently, to ways and means for keeping witnesses and evidence away from the Charities Investigating Commission. They told of efforts to dodge process servers and in two or three instances appeared to refer to the supplying of funds which would enable certain persons to take trips to Atlantic City.

The names most frequently mentioned by Mayor Mitchell were those of Monsignor J. J. Dunn, Chancellor of the Archdiocese of New York; Father Farrell, Robert W. Hebbard, former Secretary of the State Board of Charities, and Daniel C. Potter, a former employee of the city.

"The Mayor took a slightly different position in regard to the alleged Catholic conspiracy from that he apparently occupied on the preceding day. It was not the Catholic Church which had conspired to pervert justice and control government, he said, but a small group within the church, co-operating with a few non-Catholic laymen. He expressed belief that Catholics, Jews and Protestants would think as he did when they knew the whole truth of the matter.

There would be speedy criminal prosecution of those whose alleged misdeeds had been brought to his attention by Kingsbury and William H. Hotchkiss, his counsel, and confirmed by the telephone conversation overheard by the police, the Mayor said.

VISCOUNT BRYCE TELLS WHAT ENGLAND STANDS FOR IN GREAT CONFLICT

States Five Principles or Aims or Ideals, 'More or Less Parts of Britain's Settled Policy,' Which Are Involved.

IN the following article, which was written at the suggestion of a Swiss editor, James Bryce (Viscount Bryce) formerly British Ambassador to the United States, discusses the attitude of Great Britain in the present war. He says that he speaks with no more authority than is possessed by any other private citizen who has a long experience in English public affairs, but he believes that he expresses the general sentiments of his country.

This article is reprinted from the New York Times by permission:

By James Bryce.

Former British Ambassador to the United States.

HERE is a familiar expression which we use in England to sum up the position and aims of a nation. It is: "What does the nation stand for?" What are the principles and the interests which prescribe its course? What are the ends, over and above its own welfare, which it seeks to promote? What is the nature of the mission with which it feels itself charged? What are the ideals which it would like to see prevailing throughout the world?

There are five of these principles or aims or ideals which I will here set forth, because they stand out conspicuously in the present crisis, though they are all more or less parts of the settled policy of Britain.

1. The first of these five is liberty. England and Switzerland have been two modern countries in which liberty first took tangible form in laws and institutions. Holland followed, and the three peoples of the Scandinavian North, kindred to us in blood, have followed likewise.

Meaning of Liberty.

In England liberty appeared from early days in a recognition of the right of the citizen to be protected against arbitrary power and to bear his share in the work of governing his own community. It is from Great Britain that other European countries whose political condition had, from the end of the Middle Ages down to the end of the eighteenth century, been unfavorable to freedom, drew, in that and the following century, their examples of a Government which could be united and efficient and yet popular, strong to defend itself against attack, and yet respectful of the rights of its own members.

The British Constitution has been the model whence most of the countries that have within recent times adopted constitutional government have drawn their institutions. Britain has herself during the last 20 years under her constitution more and more truly popular. It is now as democratic as that of any other European country, and in their dealings with other countries the British people have shown a constant sympathy with freedom. They showed it early in the nineteenth century to Spanish constitutional reformers and to Greek insurgents against Turkish tyranny. They showed it to Switzerland when they followed (in 1847) the attempt of Metternich to interfere with her independence. They have shown it markedly within recent years. Britain has given free government to all those of her colonies in which there is a population of European origin capable of using them, and this has confirmed the attachment to herself of those colonies.

Problem of Ireland.

There had long been trouble and controversies connected with the state of Ireland, for, although she was fully represented in the British Parliament, the majority of the population expressed a desire, which excited much opposition, to have autonomous institutions granted to them. It had been found hard to find an acceptable solution of this question, chiefly because a considerable element in the Irish population did not wish for those institutions. But the question was settled in 1914 by the passing of an act giving to Ireland (subject to certain safeguards and provisions not yet settled in detail) a local Parliament as a satisfaction to national sentiment and to the desire of a majority for that kind of autonomy which they had asked for through their representatives in Parliament.

What has been the result? Ireland, on whose disaffection to the United Kingdom the German Government had been counting, has shown herself when the war broke out to be thoroughly loyal. Protestants and Roman Catholics have vied with one another in volunteering into the new armies which have been raised during the last 12 months. Some of the most powerful speeches made in defense of the war have come from the leaders of the Irish Nationalists. Some of the finest deeds of valor have been done by Irish regiments. These are the fruits of liberty as Britain has understood it and practiced it.

Principle of Nationality.

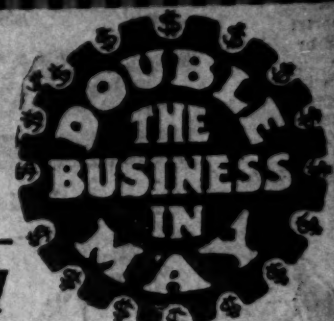

2. Britain stands for the principle of nationality. She has always given her sympathy to the efforts of a people restless under a foreign dominion to deliver themselves from the stranger and to be ruled by a Government of their own. The efforts of Greece from 1821 till her liberation from the Turks, the efforts of Italy to shake off the hated yoke of Austria and attain national unity under an Italian King, found their warmest support in England. English Liberals gave their sympathy to national movements in Hungary and Poland. They gave their sympathy also to the German movement for national unity from 1848 to 1870, for in those days that movement was led by German Liberals of lofty aims who did not desire, as the recent rulers of Germany have desired, to make their national strength a menace to the peace and security of their neighbors.

British Rule in India.

In India, England has long ceased to absorb into her dominions the native states, and has been seeking only to guide the rulers of these states into the paths of just and humane administration, while leaving their internal affairs to their own native Governments. Representative institutions like those of England herself cannot be extended to the numerous races that compose the Indian population, because they are not yet fit for such institutions. A firm and impartial hand is, indeed, needed to keep the peace among them. But the British Government in India regards, and has long regarded, its power as a trust to be used for the benefit of the people, and in recent years efforts have been made to associate the people more and more with the work of the higher

Children's Bright Eyes.

PROTECT your child's eyes. Many children are allowed to strain their eyes through neglect on the part of the parents, who fail to realize that there are greater demands made upon the eyes of the child today than formerly.

Every child should have his eyes examined at the first sign of weakness. We examine them with greatest care, and give such assistance as may be necessary to relieve them.

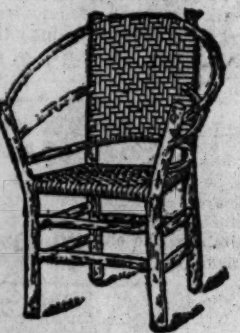

A little care now may prevent the child from wearing glasses throughout life.

54 PERSONS IN CONTEST OVER A $500,000 ESTATE

Testator, to Protect Property, Declared in Will That He Had Never Married.

FRESNO, Cal., May 25.—Close upon a contest for the estate of John M. Keith, late San Francisco oil operator, another contest over $500,000 left by Keith to his brother Amos, is to begin here today. Fifty-four persons alleged that day. Amos Keith was used to induce Amos Keith on his deathbed to make his will in favor of John A. Stephens of Carterville, Ga., and Luke W. Davis and John Keith of Selma, Ala., all nephews. Keith was a recluse near Selma.

Remembering a claim finally thrown out of court made by Dr. Sarah Tedford of Los Angeles that Mrs. Louise Thompson was John M. Keith's lost daughter and heir to his fortune, Amos Keith had the following clause inserted in his will:

"I declare that I never have been married nor engaged to be married; but as I have been in receipt of many letters from women suggesting marriage and as I have witnessed fraudulent efforts of women to claim the estate of my deceased brother, John M. Keith, I make the foregoing declaration as a protection to my estate."

What England
"Stands For" Is Told by Bryce

In time past known and admired the achievements of the German people in literature, learning and science, who had desired peace with them, who had been the constant advocates of friendship between the two nations. Such Englishmen, who do not cease to be lovers of peace because this war, felt to be righteous, commands their hearty support, are now just as determined as any others to carry on the war to victory. Why? Because to them this war presents itself as a conflict of principles.

On the one side there is the doctrine that the end of the State is power, that might makes right, that the State is above morality, that war is necessary and desirable as a factor in progress, that the rights of small states must give way to the interests of great states, that the state may disregard all obligations whether undertaken by treaties or prescribed by the common sentiment of mankind, and that what is called military necessity justifies every kind of harshness and cruelty in war.

On the other side there is the doctrine that the end of the State is justice, the doctrine that the State is, like the individual, subject to a moral law and bound in honor to observe its promises, that nations owe duties to one another and to mankind at large, that they have all means to gain by peace, that by strife, that national hatreds are deadly things, condemned by philosophy and by Christianity. In the victory of one or the other of these principles the future of mankind seems to us to be at stake.

Relief From Armaments.
Those Englishmen whose views I am seeking to express, recognizing the allegiance we all owe to humanity at large, and believing that progress is achieved more by co-operation than by strife, are, however, hoping for something more than the victory of their own country. They desire to see the world relieved from the burden of armaments and from that constant terror of war which has been darkening its sky for so many generations.

They ask whether it may not be possible, after the war has come to an end, to form among the nations an effective League of Peace, embracing smaller as well as larger peoples—under whoseegis disputes might be amicably settled and the power of the league invoked to prevent any one State from disturbing the general tranquility. The obstacles in the way of creating such a league are many and obvious, but whatever else may come out of the war, we in England hope that one result of it will be the creation of some machinery calculated to avert the recurrence of so awful a calamity as that from which mankind is now suffering.

MISS MINNIE POTTER TO APPEAR ON THE PROFESSIONAL STAGE

St. Louis Young Woman Will Have
Part in "Kitty Comes In," at Park Next Week.

Miss Minnie Potter, daughter of Mrs. William B. Potter of 421 Washington boulevard, will make her first appearance on the professional stage, Monday evening, at the Park Theater, in the play, "Kitty Comes In," written by Lella Chopin Hatterley of this city. Miss Potter has won considerable distinction for her successful portrayals of various roles in amateur performances. Two of her most recent successes were in "The Toy Shop," and "Campus Mouser."

When Miss Potter was asked if she intended to take up professional acting, she replied that she had not made up her mind on the subject. She is curious to see how she is affected by the experience and how the public receives her efforts.

Miss Potter is a member of the St. Louis branch of the Drama League, a director of the Dramatic Club and a member of the Players.

2000 MEN EASILY AVAILABLE FOR AVIATION CAMP

States Ready to Furnish Quota
Necessary to Form Big Flying Reserve.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, May 25.—Congress provided in law that 50 officers should constitute the aviation corps of the United States army. But when these aviators were needed this year in the Mexican emergency for scout and patrol duty the army could furnish only one-fourth that number of trained flying men.

The navy is now training more than the army for aerial offense and defense. A reserve of 2000 aviators for national defense, available also for the peaceful uses to which aeroplanes are fast being devoted—for coast guard, life-saving service and mail carrying—could be trained for one-tenth the cost of one dreadnought.

Ten army and 10 navy flying stations could be equipped with machines and instructors to train 2000 aviators this summer at a cost of $2,000,000. Military and naval authorities believe that such a reserve corps is a necessity, not for militarism, but for reasonable preparedness.

Scarcely 100 Pilots.

England and France have each more than 3000 aviators in active service. The United States has scarcely more than 100 trained pilots, military and civilian. Where, then, is the flying reserve coming from?

The army cannot furnish them; the navy cannot furnish them. Where shall they be recruited? Who shall train them? are questions asked by officials. In proposing the national aerial derby as an incentive to preparedness the publisher of the World wrote to the Aero Club of America in part as follows:

"This country is not a military country. Its instincts are always to be restricted standing military establishments and to rely on trained citizen reserves. This will apply to all branches of the army, including aviation corps. There is thus little prospect of getting from the army the number of officers and men required to form an adequate air service."

"If, as is the fact, we must have available for aerial defense in the next few years aviators not in hundreds but in thousands, we shall have to depend upon volunteer reserves."

The state militia organization stand ready to furnish these men for training, just so soon as the Federal Government will provide machines, instructors and training camp facilities.

Canvass of States.

The World has canvassed the sentiment of the states, through their respective Governors or Adjutant-Generals. It has never received a response on any question of national interest more enthusiastic or more nearly unanimous.

Governors or Adjutant-Generals of states assured the World within 24 hours by telegraph that they can furnish their proportion of the 2000 men for aviation training camps.

Already more than 30 militia organizations in as many states are receiving financial assistance through public-spirited citizens who have contributed to the national aeroplane fund of the Aero Club of America. More than 50 militia men are being trained as pilots at the Aero Club's expense. Citizens in this way are doing what the Government has neglected to do, because members of Congress have failed to see that the sentiment of the country, from coast to coast, demands a reasonable degree of aerial preparedness.

To discover accurately what is the sentiment of the states, the World sent the following message to each Governor, or in the Governor's absence, to the head of the State's military organization:

"Military and naval authorities believe the United States should have a reserve of 2000 trained aviators for national defense. These men could be trained this summer for $2,000,000, including cost of machines and equipment. This is one-tenth the cost of one dreadnought."

"Would your State undertake to furnish its quota of aviation recruits to be trained at no expense to your State? Prompt, concerted action should add to the army and navy reorganization bills provision for Federal training camps for this purpose."

Replies Came Promptly.

The replies, transmitted direct to the editor or through World correspondents in the State capitals, follow:

ADJUTANT-GENERAL FOSTER of Florida: Have no doubt, but Florida can and will furnish its quota of men for training. Active co-operation of this office may be depended upon.

CHARLES S. WHITMAN, Governor of New York: Many members of the national guard of New York would undoubtedly volunteer as aviation recruits this summer. I am heartily in favor of any measures that will provide for training camps for this purpose.

FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio: Ohio is for the big aviation corps proposition and will fill its quota in six hours. I am enthusiastic on this matter.

E. F. DUNN, Governor of Illinois: Should Congress provide for the formation of aero corps in the state militia and the President calls upon this State for its quota, the State will promptly respond with willing volunteers.

ERNEST L. LISTER, Governor of Washington: The State of Washington will be glad to furnish its quota of aviation recruits if provision for training is made.

MARCUS H. MOLCOM, Governor of Connecticut: Connecticut has many men interested in aviation and would furnish its full quota, as large a percentage as any state. I favor preparedness in all branches, and, judging by experience in the other side, I believe the New York World is rendering a splendid service in advocating Federal training camps for more men like Capt. Ralph Taylor of the Connecticut

TIME FOR PEACE PLANS NOT YET HERE, GREY SAYS

British Foreign Secretary Upholds Duty to Allies, in Talk in Parliament.

FRANCE SHOULD BE FIRST

Replies to Arthur Ponsonby's Protest Against Publicity in American Papers.

LONDON, May 25.—Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, speaking in the House of Commons yesterday, set aside all ideas that peace negotiations were possible at the present stage and plainly reiterated that the position of the allies was in no way changed. Sir Edward declared that it was impossible to consider terms of peace without a previous agreement between the entente allies. Further he expressed the decided opinion that the hostilities had not yet reached a stage where it was possible to talk of peace, especially as the German public was constantly being "fed with lies" by their ministers.

The question was unexpectedly raised by Arthur Ponsonby's reference to the use of the American press "as a platform" the outgrowth of a recent interview with Sir Edward Grey. Sir Edward in replying to this attack admitted that important disclosures of policy ought first to be made to Parliament, argued that a crisis might arise during the war when considerations of etiquette should not be allowed to stand in the way. He contended that since German statesmen constantly were giving interviews and statements to the American press, it would be mere pedantry which would hinder British statesmen from counteracting these statements in the interests of their own country.

Urges Peace Consideration. Ponsonby argued in favor of countenancing peace possibilities and against prolonging the war merely for the sake of obligations to Great Britain's allies. The speaker said that if the war had to be continued until Constantinople fell, or until the unknown obligations to allies were fulfilled, the country ought to be told what those obligations were, and if there was no essential difference between Germany and Great Britain and no such obligations, the Government ought to take the earliest opportunity to press for a termination of the war.

Sir Edward Grey, in replying, pointed out that his interview contained no new declarations. He had no prepared speeches or statement to make, but he said if he thought the German Government or German opinion had reached the point where the allied Governments could bring a peace, compatible with their desires, nearer by making speeches about peace, he would make dozens of them. But, the Foreign Minister added, the time had not yet arrived, and the allies were bound by common obligations not to put forward any terms of peace except by mutual agreement.

Ponsonby strongly attacked the Government's diplomacy. He said the peace of Europe would depend on the capacity of statesmen for surveying the great problems in a broad spirit. The insularity which had characterized British diplomacy in the past constituted the real danger. The Government must recognize that the war had reached a deadlock, and at the same time the superior position of Great Britain also must be recognized. The latter was due to the spirit and valor of the people and not to statesmen.

Disquieted Resented by Ponsonby. The speaker said he hoped the statesmen were not going to imperil the situation by delay and inaptitude. Nothing had helped Germany more than the extreme jingo utterances of responsible statesmen. They had enabled Prussianism to keep Germany together. Ponsonby said recriminations must cease. He considered it wanting in respect to the British people for the Ministers to disregard Parliament and then adopt the American press as a platform.

The war would never end, Ponsonby continued, if Great Britain waited until Sir Edward Grey and Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg (the German Imperial Chancellor) agreed as to who was responsible for it. Had Germany refused to restore Belgium, evacuate France and Serbia and form an independent Poland; had she refused to agree to form an international council to maintain European peace, Ponsonby asked if she had refused these things the country ought to be told.

James Ramsay MacDonald, labor member, supported Ponsonby. He declared that peace was a political and not a military problem and that it was the duty of the Government to state the terms on which it was prepared to conclude peace.

Sir Edward Grey, in the course of his speech, characterized Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's recent statement that Great Britain was prepared to go to war over Bosnia as "a first class lie." The real reason for the prolongation of the war was that the German Government was continually telling their people that they were winning the war and that the allies were beaten.

Sir Edward here made the declaration that the time for peace had not yet arrived, and that the entente allies were under obligations not to act separately on peace terms. He added that if any of the allies had a right to speak with regard to peace at the present moment, it was France, on whom the concentrated fury of the German attack had been thrown.

Grey Rebukes Ponsonby.

Rebuking Ponsonby for making no allusion to Verdun, Sir Edward said: "Through the long Battle of Verdun France is saving not only herself, but her allies as well. If anyone has a right to speak about peace it is France, and President Poincaré has spoken. I believe it is the duty of diplomacy to maintain the solidarity of the allies and give the utmost support to the naval and military measures which are being taken by the allies in common to bring the war to a stage it has not yet reached, and in which the prospect of maintaining an enduring peace will be with the allies. Mr. Ponsonby has hardly seemed to realize that we were at war.

The Folly of Taking Digestive Pills

A Warning to Dyspeptics.

The habit of taking digestive pills after meals makes chronic dyspepsia of many thousands of men and women because artificial digestants, drugs and medicines have practically no influence upon the excessively acid condition of the stomach contents which is the cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The after-dinner pill merely lessens the sensitiveness of the stomach nerves and thus gives a false sense of freedom from pain. If those who are subject to indigestion, gas, flatulence, belching, bloating, acidity, stopes food, ferment, would get about an ounce of pure bile salts dissolved in a little water after meals there would be no further necessity for drugs or medicines because bile stimulates the stomach, neutralizes stomach acidity, stops food fermentation by enabling the stomach to do its work without hindrance.—ADV.

was no good will." Sir Edward then referred to the previous Balkan conference as proof of Great Britain's good faith in such conferences and added: "I only wish the German and Austrian Governments had published the reports of their Ambassadors as to the part Great Britain played at that conference."

Flesh Building Test

FOR THIN MEN AND WOMEN

Say Weight is Increased At Rate of Three to Five Pounds a Week in Many Instances.

If you are ten pounds or more under weight and would like during the next few weeks to take on several pounds of good, solid, healthy flesh, without in any way interfering with your work or regular habits and without danger to your health in any way, here is a simple, inexpensive and harmless test that is well worth trying:

First weigh yourself. Then with each meal for ten days and each night as you go to bed take a single Sargol tablet. Then weigh yourself again and let the scales tell the story.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixes with your meals for the purpose of stimulating your powers of assimilation, and so makes it easier for your blood to accept your food's strength, flesh and fat-making nourishment and turn it into strength, flesh and fat upon your body. Some people say "nothing can make me eat." I'm built to stay thin." But until you have tried Sargol you do not and cannot know this is true. Many who succeed. There are many reports like the following: "I have increased my weight in less than a month," wrote a man from Colorado. "Another man who said he had been losing over a pound a week, and was unable to gain weight, took two pounds the first week taking Sargol. He gained 10 pounds and am still gaining." Sargol, as a rule, should be taken 10 days or more where results like above are desired.

The tablets are small, easily swallowed, produce no disagreeable effects, contain no habit drugs, are harmless and not at all expensive as compared with results said to be obtained.

NOTE—Sargol, referred to above, is well known as a flesh-builder in Wolf-Wilson, Drug Co., Johnson-Enderburg, Drug Co., and other leading local druggists, who further advise you on the positive guarantee, as found in each large package, of satisfactory weight increase or money back. In view of the liberal offer and the harmless nature of the remedy, it would seem that all who desire increased weight should be glad to give this method a trial.—ADV.

KIRKWOOD SCHOOL EXERCISES TO BE HELD AS PLANNED

Superintendent Had Called Them Off Because Those Conducting Revival Objected.

RESULTED IN PROTESTS

Official Thought Program
Should Be Abandoned Out of Spirit of Self-denial.

At a conference this morning between Supt. Nelson Kerr of the Kirkwood schools and representatives of the union revival being conducted in a tabernacle in Kirkwood by Evangelist Charles T. Wheeler, the church people withdrew their objections which yesterday caused the school at Kirkwood to announce that the school commencement exercises would be abandoned in a spirit of self-denial in order to prevent interference with the revival. Supt. Kerr then prepared a letter announcing that the commencement program, the principal feature of which will be a school pageant June 2, will be carried out as originally planned.

The announcement of Supt. Kerr that the pageant and other commencement festivities would be abandoned caused great disappointment to the school children and brought protests from many mothers who had gone to trouble and expense to provide costumes for their children. In his statement, Supt. Kerr said that "in the interest of harmony, good will and community spirit, announcements are made calling off the public school rehearsal, the school pageant, commencement sermon and public reception for patrons of the school."

Matter in Kerr's Hands.
W. G. Lackey, vice president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., president of the Kirkwood School Board, said today the matter was entirely in the hands of Supt. Kerr, who had been authorized to arrange for whatever commencement exercises he thought best. Lackey said he understood that requests of church people that the schools give up their exercises to avoid conflict with the revival meetings prompted Supt. Kerr's action.

When it was learned how disappointed the children were, Lackey said, some of the same church people proposed to Supt. Kerr that the pageant be held and that the revival give way for that one night.

Howard E. Nicholls, vice president of the School Board, said today that he was in favor of the schools going ahead with the entire commencement program. Six mothers complained to him this morning, he said. He said it was true that the board authorized the Superintendent to arrange all details of commencement exercises, but he said it was with the understanding that the usual exercises would be held.

Bride of President's Physician and Husband on 3 Weeks' Trip

DR. AND MRS. WILLIAM CAREY GRAYSON.

NEW YORK, May 25.—President and Mrs. Wilson were the chief guests yesterday at the wedding of Dr. Cary T. Grayson, the White House physician, and Miss Alice Gertrude Gordon of Washington and New York in the chapel of St. George's Church.

The President came here especially for the ceremony and left here shortly afterward for Washington.

The President and his wife, accompanied by Secretary and Mrs. McAdoo, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, the President's cousin, Charles R. Crane of Chicago and John Radolph Bolling, a brother of Mrs. Wilson, arrived at the chapel at 4 o'clock and the ceremony was at once begun.

The ceremony was performed by Rev.

William J. Cox of Philadelphia, who used the Episcopal service. Miss Gordon had no bridesmaids and was given away by Patrick W. Flournoy of Charleston, W. Va. Surgeon A. M. Fauntleroy, United States navy, was best man, and Col. W. W. Harris, United States army, military aid to the President, and Capt. Robert L. Berry, United States navy, the President's naval aid, were ushers, all three accompanying the bridegroom in the walk to the chapel.

Dr. and Mrs. Grayson departed for a three weeks' wedding tour and afterward will live in Washington. Presents were received by the couple from the President and his wife, employees of the White House, members of the Cabinet and many Government officials, Senators and Representatives.

LAWYER TAKES ISSUE WITH MINOR AT WAR LECTURE

C. H. Fauntleroy Tells Cartoonist
U. S. Army Is Not Intended to Collect Debts.

Robert Minor of New York, a former Post-Dispatch cartoonist, was interrupted by Cornelius H. Fauntleroy, a St. Louis lawyer, in his talk last night at Aschenbroedel Hall, 3335 Pine street, on his observations in the European war zone.

Minor repeated the assertion which he made in an interview in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, that the real purpose of American military and naval preparedness is to add moneyed interests in collecting war debts, which he thinks the European countries will try to repudiate after the war is over.

"The money power knows that it may have trouble collecting its European debts," Minor declared, "and it is demanding a big army and navy, in order to use them for this purpose later on."

Here Fauntleroy spoke up. "I am a lawyer," he said, "and I wish to object to such statements being made. The fact is that the Constitution of the United States would not permit anything of the sort."

"The Constitution," Minor replied, "will permit anything that the moneyed interests desire."

Disregards Patriotism.
Minor then spoke in a vein which showed that he disregarded considerations of national patriotism, and took the viewpoint of internationalism. "It would be a terrible thing, wouldn't it," he said, "if the Germans should conquer this country, and men with German names should gain control of the great enterprises which are now headed by Mr. Guggenheim and Mr. Schwab?"

He also ridiculed the idea of upholding American rights on the seas, and asked his hearers how many of them intended to spend their vacations in Europe this year.

Minor said war correspondents are not permitted to tell the truth about the war, and that none of the countries will tolerate a correspondent who tries to tell the truth impartially. If anyone denies or questions a story of an atrocity committed by the enemy, Minor said, he is in danger of being shot as a spy.

He cited, as an instance, a story sent out from France early in the war, to the effect that German prisoners had saw-toothed bayonets. The fact was, he said, that the saw-tooth affairs were not bayonets, but saws for use in cutting wire and underbrush. (This explanation, however, was printed shortly after the publication of the story.)

Takes Rap at T. R.
Minor denounced Col. Roosevelt, who, he said, came from a "pampered family," and William R. Hearst. He said he had attacked Roosevelt in talks he made in New York, regarding the Mexican situation, and that representatives of Hearst had threatened to have him jailed.

Minor described himself as "desperately and fanatically neutral." He told stories of the fraternizing of German and English soldiers, in hells of trench fighting. Hymns of hate, he said, are for the consumption of civilians at a safe distance behind the firing line. The men who are doing the fighting do not hate each other, he said, and they are all pretty much the same sort of men. Minor had a large audience, mostly Socialists and labor union members, but including a number of professional men and women. He spoke for an hour and a half.

MAN ONCE IN PRISON AGAIN ARRESTED ON OLEO CHARGE

Revenue Agent Bitten by Dog When Searching Home of Wellston Creamery Store Proprietor.
William F. Engler, 6516 Hazen avenue, St. Louis County, was arrested this morning by Revenue Agents on a charge of illicit coloring of oleomargarine. Engler is proprietor of a creamery store at 6222 Easton avenue.

On Feb. 16, 1915, he pleaded guilty to a charge of illicit coloring of oleomargarine and was sentenced to serve a year and a day in the Federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan. He was paroled after having served five months of the sentence.

Engler was carrying a tub, marked "Uncolored Oleomargarine," but which proved to contain the colored product, when he was arrested. A bottle of coloring fluid was found in his home. When searching the house, Revenue Agent Duncan was attacked by a small dog and bitten on the calves of both legs, though not seriously.

TWO OF BOQUILLAS RAIDERS BROUGHT TO TEXAS FOR TRIAL

Officer Admits He Took Part; Other Declares He Remained Across Border.

MARATHON, Tex., May 25.—Lieutenant-Colonel Natividad Alvarez, leader of one of the bandit bands that raided Boquillas, and Manuel Torres, another of the raiders, were brought here early today and given into custody of Deputy Sheriff Shoemaker to be taken to Alpine for trial before the civil authorities.

Alvarez admitted he had played a part in the sacking of Boquillas' store. Torres declared he did not participate in the raid. He said he was one of 10 left on the Mexican side to guard the retreat.

REICHSTAG HEARS PROTESTS AGAINST HIGH CENSORSHIP

Objection Is Also Made to Interference of the Military in Purely Civil Matters.

BERLIN, via London, May 25.—The Reichstag devoted this afternoon to a discussion of the press censorship and other features of martial law which are causing dissatisfaction. The budget committee moved the adoption of resolutions requiring the military authorities to obtain the consent of the Chancellor before they order the suspension of the publication of any newspaper and asking the Chancellor to introduce a bill securing the people against encroachments on their civil rights in nonmilitary matters. Another resolution asked the Chancellor to guarantee the impartiality of censorship and its confinement to military matters only.

Several speakers complained that the censorship has grown worse rather than better since the last discussion in the Reichstag. Deputy Pfleger demanded the complete abolition of the political censorship.

The Savings Habit

There are a hundred reasons why a man should save part of his income and place it in a Mercantile Savings Account. Every banking institution adds to its surplus and profit account each year besides paying expenses and dividends. The same rule ought to apply to the individual to the extent that he is adding steadily to his savings account, which is his surplus and profit account.

Further, the corner stone of that fortune you want to build is "thrift." If you never lay the corner stone, you will never start building your fortune.

And remember your savings with the Mercantile are under United States Government protection.

Love Finds a Way

A story which shows that when Dan Cupid sets his shaft for one there's not much use in trying to dodge the aim.

By George Elmer Cobb.

THERE were two predominating features, dread and timidity, in the thoughts and actions of Ralph Burton as the leap year came in and he was made the target of organized menace and rivalry on the part of those who fancied they could play upon his weaknesses.

"You're a selected victim, Burton!" declared more than one of the little town club of which he was a member. "Oh, he'll never escape through the month!" insisted others. "You'd better keep away from the trap of social functions."

"I rarely favor them," observed Burton gravely.

"And have a bodyguard," was the further advice. "I understand that the girls' clubs laid out a regular program, with dates and victims. Not an unmarried man in the town will escape."

"Yes, and a well-fixed individual like Burton will be the special object of persecution!"

Ralph Burton smiled, but it was not a natural smile. Nature had awarded him a shrinking, self-deprecating temperament and he had never battled it. At 23 he found himself a reserved young bachelor with an inborn veneration for all womanhood, yet bashful and retiring. If he had ever loved, he had never been able to summon up the courage to confess the fact to the object of his adoration.

"A confirmed woman hater," was the ultimatum of more than one of those disappointed, for in intelligence and fortune Burton was a most eligible party.

The Boys at the Club.

THE "boys" at the club were fond of jokes, and the arrival of the month with 29 days in it favored their wicked designs.

"Now, then, you want to rush the program hot and heavy?" was the decision of Ned Wain, a dressmaker and maker and therefore the plot to give Burton a period of misery was set in motion.

"A young lady called twice, sir," was the announcement of his landlady, two evenings later, when Burton came home from the office.

He colored and fidgeted. Visits from young ladies comprised a proceeding to which Burton was an utter stranger. He could not even recall where recently he had joined company with a member of the opposite sex so far as a single block on the public street.

"Er—that is strange. Leave any name? Ah, perhaps, my sister from Smithville."

"Oh, no, sir—I know her," disclosed the landlady. "She was veiled. Your visitor was young and graceful and acted very anxious to see you. It struck me she was quite mysterious. And when she left I noticed she joined two other ladies in the street."

"Witnesses!" gasped Burton to himself. "If all the crowd told about the landlady's account of the leap-year visitor, did not appear again, however true, I fear I am going to be the object of some annoyance."

For three days Burton did not go home to dinner. For three evenings he went without a light in his room and barricaded the doors. His "veiled lady visitor" did not appear again, however. He began to feel relieved, when a letter reached him.

Burton Receives a Bouquet.

ITS pages were delicately scented and the handwriting was exquisitely dainty. Its sentiments were burning, professing "the ardent admiration of a longing soul seeking a life ideal," and finding it in him. It promised further epistles, it suggested that he wear a pink carnation in his coat the next day. In order that his correspondent might know that her continued attentions were not distasteful to him.

That especial morning Burton buttoned up his coat tightly and reached his office by unrequited byways. He stayed away from the club, he had serious thoughts of taking a vacation. When one day a bouquet was delivered, he decided that affairs had reached the limit. He was so disturbed that he decided to take a day off.

Burton made for the outskirts, craving for a day's solitude in the woods. As he passed a certain house he gave one startled glance behind him and quickened his pace. His bushing glance had caught sight of a faded lady of uncertain age waving her hand at him and calling his name. He feigned not to hear. He saw her throw a light wrap over her shoulders. He saw her run out of the front door.

"Gracious!" gasped Burton. "I do believe she is going to follow me. Yes, she is, and leap year—say! I may be the one who sent me those flowers."

In desperation Burton edged off the street. A row of bushes protected him. How was he to know that Miss Celia Dempster was simply seeking from him a contribution to the town relief fund for the poor?

He Dodges Into the Barn.

WHEN as he glided through the open doorway of a great barn and realized where he was, Burton flushed to the roots of his hair. Why! he had invaded the precincts of the Morton home, and Ruth Morton was a very dear name to him, although he had never told anyone so no one, not even Ruth herself, who would have been pleased to learn the fact.

Twice he had been Ruth's escort to a town entertainment. Then he had been too bashful to call. Often he had thought of her. Now he dodged farther into the barn. Ruth and four of her little sisters and brothers who were accompanying her were making straight for his retreat.

"Way, Mr. Burton!" exclaimed Ruth, and she looked really pleased, though flustered, as she came upon him, "is this your long-lost-for call?"

"Er—why, yes," declared Burton in stammering tones, feeling that he was acting like a dunce. "That is, I—well, I'm taking a day off and you see, sort of putting in the time."

"Which you can do to decided advantage to us," said the sprightly Ruth. "Myself and this brood have about 30 bushels of apples to pare and cut for evaporation. You shall string. Will it please you?"

"Please me? It will be delightful!" declared Burton. "Then come, sir, you must be aproned like the rest of us!"

What a vision pervaded him as Ruth tied a big kitchen apron around him! What a novelty to be seated amid the gayly chattering group, doing his share of the work!

Out in the Moonlight.

THEN there was a grand lunch, then a ramble in the orchard. Mrs. Morton insisted on his staying to tea, and then there was moonlight, and a feverishly delicious critical moment at the garden gate, his own face close to the charming one of Ruth.

What ever possessed him? What put new courage into his timid soul? What irradiated his being as, after blushing out all the story of his fears and his hopes, he found in Ruth a truly loyal sympathizer.

Love, love, love!—it drove him, bold as a lion, to the club that evening. His fellow members stared. There was a new Burton revealed. He bore his head high. There was a happy smile on his face.

"Got you yet—the leap-year pirates?" questioned one of the group who had driven Burton into paradise.

"Oh, yes," answered Burton, and there was a cheer and joy in his tones. "One of the fair ladies has. Only she didn't ask me. Tell it to the world that I am the happiest man in town! I'm going to marry!"

But he got no farther. The crowd already knew and cheered Burton lustily.

The Fox Who Was Vain

By Mr. F. A. Walker.

MR. FOX was trotting one morning through the woods by a river, so he stopped for a drink of water.

Just as he was dipping his head into the water he caught sight of himself in the clear depths and he stopped to admire himself.

"I know what I will do," said Mr. Fox. "I will have my picture taken. I wonder I never thought of it before. I will run off and ask Mr. Bear if he knows who can photograph me."

Mr. Bear was sitting in his doorway smoking his pipe when Mr. Fox came along.

"I want to have my picture taken," said Mr. Fox. "Do you know where I can find anyone to do it? And I particularly want a good picture of my tail."

Now Mr. Bear had been to a circus once and remembered that a man took his picture, so he said to Mr. Fox: "Why, I can take it! I know all about how it is done, but you will have to come back tomorrow because I haven't any outfit just now."

"All right; I will be back in the morning early," said Mr. Fox.

So Mr. Bear scurried about. First he got a box which he put on top of the stump of a tree, then he hunted up a piece of black cloth, but where he should find a picture he did not know.

MR. BEAR searched everywhere for a picture that would look like Mr. Fox, but none did he find. "He said he particularly wanted a good picture of his bushy tail," said Mr. Bear. "Perhaps this will do," he said at last. "This is good and bushy, too."

Off he ran to his home with the picture.

"Platonic Friendship"

By Sophie Irene Loeb.

ONCE I defined platonic friendship as the interval between the introduction and the first kiss. But how that expression is put to so many uses it might well be revised.

I would say platonic friendship is a term now used for flirtations that are not within the law.

BE wary of a married woman who sings and tells you what a beautiful platonic friendship she has with Mr. Jones. If it is so it is one case in a hundred.

The minute the clandestine element enters into it it is beyond the realm of Plato. And Mephistopheles, dressed like Cupid, is hovering in the middle distance.

The divorce judges are working overtime hearing "platonic friendship" cases. The defendants have been always learning languages, or having their pictures painted, or getting music lessons, or being instructed by their chauffeurs, or taking treatments, or playing golf, or studying New Thought—all "platonic."

Such platonic friendship might have existed when gods were on earth, but not today. Distance lends enchantment, but nearness spoils it. We are only human. There are elements to deal with, such as magnetism and personality and the attraction of the sexes. Here are a few instances in which you may be sure platonic friendship has gone beyond the pale.

It is not platonic friendship for a married woman to have a man friend whom her husband has never met.

It is not platonic friendship for a husband to seek the society of a woman whom he does not introduce to his wife.

It is not platonic friendship for a wife to spend the summer in the country playing at outdoor games with one man companion while her husband is working hard in town to keep her there.

It is not platonic friendship

when a girl is always seen dining with a married man.

It is not platonic friendship to flirt with all men and women known to your husband.

It is not platonic friendship when the woman says: "He is so nice, but I can't bear his wife."

It is not platonic friendship when money is the element that attracts.

It is not platonic friendship when you are the wife of a poor man and the platonic friend has money to spend. And, above all, it is not platonic friendship when its existence must be kept secret.

Some New Recipes

PREPARED by New England housewives—best of all good cooks.

Prune Cream—A good way to use a cup of stewed prunes, that may be left for a simple dessert, is to strain the prunes through a sieve, adding enough of the juice to make a cupful, and one cup of rich milk with pinch of salt. Then heated to the boiling point in double boiler, add the yolks of two eggs, well beaten, one tablespoon of cornstarch, and one-third of a cup of sugar, all mixed with a little cold milk. Add one teaspoon of vanilla as soon as this has formed a custard. Cool and serve in sherbert glasses, with whipped cream and some chopped walnuts. A marshmallow gives a dainty touch to each serving.

Pound Cake—One cup of butter packed solid, 1 1/2 cups of granulated sugar, 1/2 teaspoon mace, 5 unbated eggs, 2 cups of sifted pastry flour. Have round pan greased and floured, the oven ready and ingredients measured, as the mixing must all be done by hand. Cream the butter, add sugar and work until very light, add spice and 1 egg at a time and stir with the hand until you do not see any of the egg yolk, then another egg and so on until all are used, then mix in the flour; turn at once into pan and bake slowly about 1 hour.

Delicious Bread Pudding—Break into casserole or baking dish until the dish is about half full leftovers of bread, doughnuts and cake. Use about 2 1/2 bread and 1 1/2 cake and doughnuts. Fill the dish nearly full of milk, and bring to a boil on top of the stove, then set it back and leave it about an hour. Beat together 1 or 2 eggs, 1/4 cup sugar, 1 good teaspoon salt with cinnamon and nutmeg to taste. Stir this and 1/2 cup raisins into the bread and milk. Bake in moderate oven 1 hour without covering.

Meek Venison—Slices of saddle of mutton, 1 large tablespoon butter to every two slices of mutton, 1 tablespoon currant jelly, 1 mill madeira, salt and cayenne pepper. Put butter into chafing dish and when hot add the mutton, cover and cook two minutes; when real hot, turn and cook two minutes longer. Add salt and a pinch of cayenne, jelly and Madeira. Simmer six minutes and serve hot on hot plates.

Chapters From a Bride's Life-Story.

CHAPTER II.

JUNE 30—It is the day after my wedding, and the train is rushing us along to the blessed little fishing village on the edge of Maine, where we are to spend our honeymoon. I have sent Ned into the smoking room, for one of the things about which I have firmly made up my mind is that I WILL NOT be a henny wife. Even on our honeymoon I'm going to teach myself not to "tag" Ned. And, besides, I have a chance, now that I am alone for a little while, to tell my diary about my wedding day.

It seems 24 years instead of 24 hours ago. And the two things that stand out in my mind most vividly are two queer things. One of these is the talk I had with Ned's mother. And the other is the girl with the red cape.

Ned's mother is a tall person who looks so much like him—I mean, I suppose, that he looks like her. She is beautiful, I think, but some way she makes one feel as if she were wearing a mask. Occasionally the mask slips, and one sees such sad, tired eyes behind it.

She came to me early in the afternoon of my wedding day. And she said a strange thing. She looked at me with eyes that are Ned's and asked abruptly: "Do you know my son?"

A Mother's Confession.

SHE didn't wait for an answer. "You know," she said, "I am a brilliant, attractive, lovable and that he loves you—now. But do you know that he is selfish and that at times he has an utterly unmanageable temper?"

"But Ned is the most wonderful man I have ever known," I cried. Then I began to grow angry. "How can you, his mother, tell me such things about him?" I demanded.

"I tell you as a penance," she answered, in her even tones. "I spoiled Ned when he was little and I never taught him self-control. Only since he has grown up have I seen how foolish I was, and yet even now I love him so much that I could not bear to tell you these things till the last minute. There—there are other things I might tell you"—she hesitated.

"I don't want to hear them," I cried indignantly. "I love Ned and nobody, not even his mother, shall tell me things about him."

Suddenly her hands were on my shoulders and she was kissing me for the first time. "My dear," she said, "I beg your pardon. I am very glad my son is going to marry you and I hope never to be sorry that you are going to marry him. Don't—don't let yourself be hurt."

And she was gone before I could answer her.

I have not told Ned about the conversation. I am going to try to forget it. I know, in a general way, that he must have faults, but I don't want to think about any particular ones. And I do not think I shall tell him about the girl in the red cape.

I heard Leonie, the maid that we've had since I was a little girl, grumbling about it in a general way, that he must have faults, but I don't want to think about any particular ones. And I do not think I shall tell him about the girl in the red cape.

"Who is she, mother?" I questioned quickly.

"A poor woman—I think she must be a little mad—who said that the settlement sent her here," said my mother, reminding me of a neighborhood house in which we are interested. "And she asked for me," she added, with a reproving glance at Leonie.

Dollar-Grabbing Dangers.

DR. HENRY NOBLE McCracken, president of Vassar College, says "the modern tendency of education is to undervalue all that does not have a visible dollar and cents value. The economic side is ever uppermost, and the greater part of our educational facilities is trained upon the problem of becoming successful in the business world."

"The danger in our present attitude is that in our eagerness to be practical we forget to be theoretical, thus putting the cart before the horse, as it were."

Except along the Caspian coast, Persian agriculture is dependent almost entirely on irrigation.

SHOULDN'T have thought of the incident again, but last night just as I started down the aisle at the church a young woman in a red cape standing at the end of one of the unreserved pews leaned forward so that her cape almost brushed my veil. In her hand was a letter—and in her eyes was the most horrible look of anger and defiance and shame and misery. Her eyes compelled mine; if she had handed me the letter I could not have refused it. And then the whole expression of her face changed and I could have sworn that she was pitying me—but that was preposterous. She drew back and I moved on.

I wish, I wish I could forget her face. But, you see, I caught another glimpse of it in the studio last night. And again she looked as if she were pitying me—me, Ned's wife.

HEAD OF COLLEGE

OF MASSACRES

Armenians Killed With Clubs to Save Gunpowder, Dr. McNaughton Says.

Most of the Armenians murdered by Turks, in the course of the massacre of the last few months, have been killed with axes and clubs, to save gunpowder, according to Dr. J. P. McNaughton, director of the American College in Turkey, who spoke last night to the congregations of Pilgrim Congregational and Union Avenue Christian Churches, at Pilgrim Church. Dr. McNaughton is traveling through the United States with Henry Morgenthau, Ambassador to Turkey.

Dr. McNaughton said the most moderate estimate of the number of Armenians who have perished in the massacres is 500,000, this number including those who have died of hunger and exposure in the long forced marches of deportation. Direct massacre, torture and deportation are the three methods which have been used with the Armenians, he declared. He said an East Indian Mohammedan had told him that, in some parts of India the Moslem population had held meetings and passed resolutions condemning the brutality practiced by their fellow-Moslems, the Turks, against the people of Armenia.

The roads along which deportation caravans have passed, he declared, are strewn with dead bodies. A missionary counted 500 bodies in the course of a short ride, he said.

Now that the Russians have expelled the Turks from a part of Armenia, Dr. McNaughton said, the survivors are returning to their former homes to find their houses burned and their farms laid waste. Those in charge of relief work are trying to supply farm animals needed in cultivating the land, to make a crop possible and avert a famine next winter.

Dr. McNaughton said his traveling expenses and other expenses of collecting funds had been underwritten, and that every cent contributed in this country for relief will be spent directly in that work. He said Armenians living in the United States have given to the limit of their means. He appealed to his hearers for contributions, to be made through their pastors.

Ambassador Morgenthau, who has resigned his diplomatic post in order to be free to tell Americans the facts regarding the Armenian massacres, spoke last night at Temple Square. He spoke of the pitiful condition of the exiled Armenians. He also described conditions in Turkey proper, where he said the high cost of living had reached a point which threatens the people with starvation. He is still Ambassador, as President Wilson has not accepted his resignation.

Bernard Gerdes, 13 years old, of 913 Madison street, was arrested last night while driving an automobile belonging to J. F. CHIEF DEFENSE WITNESS IN $50,000 SLANDER SUIT MISSING

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 25.—In the unexpected absence of Joseph H. Hazen, chief witness for the defense in the trial of the $50,000 slander suit instituted by Alexander Howat, president of the Kansas District, United Mine Workers of America, against Charles S. Keith, former president, and other officials of the Southwest Interstate Coal Operators Association, yesterday's sessions of the trial were occupied with the reading of depositions by Keith. In these Keith testified that he gave Hazen approximately $20,000 to be used to influence favorable clauses in the miners' contracts with the operators.

Hazen, in depositions taken before the trial, said he paid Howat most of the money.

Announcement that Hazen was not expected to be a witness created a sensation. It was said that he had gone to California, then to British Columbia, where all trace of him was lost.

ling of husbands, were sealed inside—2000 on the floor, 2000 in the galleries, 900 on the platform and the remainder in the boxes.

Gov. Whitman and Fire Commissioner Adamson, as representatives of the Mayor, were on the platform tendering the Federation the keys of the city when the police, powerless to stem the enormous crush, closed the doors.

Dignitaries who had just alighted from their limousine and dismissed them at the curb, guests of honor, delegates from distant cities, all in evening dress, were hustled back from the steps and told that not another person would be permitted to enter.

The box party of Mrs. William Tod Helmut, one of the founders of the federation, was among the excluded.

Mrs. William Cumming Storey, president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who was expected on the platform, was finally passed. Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, the California candidate for the presidency, and Mrs. George Bass, Illinois "dark horse," were shut out in the first rush, but admitted later with a second relay.

The police explained the blockade as the result of hundreds of tickets issued in excess of the capacity of the armory. The committees insisted that many visiting club women's tickets have been obtained by fraudulent registration at the Hotel Astor. In the beginning all tickets were honored in the order of their presentation.

When the immense crowds began to pour in the police, under orders from the women, admitted only those who showed delegates' badges, but when hundreds of certified delegates reached the hall, their places were already filled and the final lockout, which occurred just before the opening hour, 8:30, excluded saint and sinner alike; a delegate's badge was no more than waste paper. The disappointed throngs lingered about the doors for almost an hour before they consented to disperse.

The federation opened its business session today in the Seventh Regiment Armory. Elaborate preparations have been made for an excursion tomorrow at Atlantic City. The special train will include a baggage car reserved for dancing. The train will return Sunday.

To End Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your drugist and get 1 ounce of Parmit (double strength) and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.—ADV.

GOVERNOR SEES FIST FIGHT ON CAPITOL GROUNDS

Adjutant-General of Louisiana and Applicant for His Job Battle Thirty Minutes.

BATON ROUGE, La., May 25.—Adjutant-General Oswald W. McNeesse of the Louisiana National Guard, and Maj. A. D. Stewart, manager of the Cosmopolitan Hotel in New Orleans, invoked the code duello to satisfy wounded honor yesterday on the grounds of the State Capitol building. They employed the oldest weapon of man—the fist—and fought 30 minutes in utter disregard of Queensbury regulations, under a giant magnolia tree, 60 feet from the window of the Governor's private office.

At the end there were smashed noses, split lips, closed eyes and bumps generally.

The State Legislature, in session at the moment, adjourned in confusion, while members rushed to points of vantage to view the affray. Gov. R. G. Pleasant, several other State officials, clerks, stenographers and townspeople saw the combat. Each participant appears to have given the other "a good licking" and both have gone into retirement.

Affair of honor, which could be settled only according to the code, was a quarrel over a successor to McNeesse, who retires from office in a few days. Maj. Stewart is a candidate for the office, and is said to have accused Gen. McNeesse of "putting him in line with the War Department at Washington" to thwart the selection of Stewart by Gov. Pleasant.

Maj. Stewart's second was Maj. R. M. Tompkins and Adjutant-General McNeesse's was Lamar Baker, secretary of the Department of Aviation. Maj. Stewart and Gen. McNeesse weigh 200 and 185 pounds respectively, and both have been well-known athletes. They served in the Spanish-American War.

Coast Guard Officer Says Missourians Should Work for It.

Lieut. William J. Wheeler, U. S. Coast Guard, on duty with the Government's "Safety First" Special, at Union Station yesterday, said that he believed St. Louisans should urge their representatives in Congress to support the bill providing for the building of three light, fast revenue cutters for use on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers in times of flood.

These boats, he said, would afford great protection to endangered towns. It is planned that the boats be equipped with wireless and carry four fast motor boats. The cutters are designed to draw but three and one-half feet of water, and are to be 160 feet in length with a beam of 25 feet.

CADOMENE TABLETS LIFT YOU OVER THE WALL OF NERVOUS DISCONTENT AND WORRY

When the structures of the system are in perfect health they work without attracting attention or causing any alarm. The moment that any part of the system has become inefficient in functioning, or cries out in pain, then you know you have been attacked by nerve and tissue weakness.

You become conscious of an unnatural condition, your heart beats wildly after exertion or excitement, you suffer with nervous headaches, the nerves in the spinal cord, on account of their overtaxed, weakened condition, cause pains in the back, drawing at the base of the brain, irritability of temper, uneven mood, sleeplessness, cold clammy feeling, you lack will-power, energy and ambition.

Not only is the nervous system the seat of all intelligence, memory, reason or probably of the very soul itself, but every movement of the various structures of the body depends upon nerve action. Hence when the nerves suffer from debility or weakness, trouble is instantly felt in one or more of the structures. It is the chronic lack or derangement of function of these various tissues of the body which causes so much alarm, discontent and unhappiness. Close examination may disclose no trace of disease or pain, but nerves and tissues may not be working properly. Like an engine with insufficient fuel, the full supply of nerve force is not forthcoming.

Overwork, worry, dissipation, excesses, etc., are the keynote to nerve derangement. A perfectly nourished nervous system might go on indefinitely.

When CADOMENE TABLETS are directed to the nervous system the cause and origin of the disturbance is reached. By the tonic and nutritive action of Cadomene Tablets on the nerve and tissue cells every muscle, nerve and structure of the system are brought up to par and naturally restored to accomplish their normal work.

The mind brightens, muscular tone is increased, all the bodily functions are regulated, sleep is sound and undisturbed, and the excessive weariness of nerve and tissue weakness, discontent and worry are things of the past.

Cadomene Tablets are prepared in convenient form and may be carried around in the pocket or purse and taken regularly.

Obtain from any live druggist, in sealed tube, with full directions.

For sale by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., and all live druggists.

WAR COLLEGE TELLS WHY IT FAVORS WYOMING PLAN FOR TRAINING BOYS IN SCHOOL

WASHINGTON, May 25.—In a memorandum which outlines a plan for the military training of the boys of the public schools of the country, the War College Division of the general staff of the army points out that in the event of war the United States would need with in 90 days after the declaration of hostilities an army of at least 1,000,000 men, not taking into consideration the other hundreds of thousands that would immediately be called for training.

"To prepare for this," says the War College, "requires us to use every available means of educating the young as to their future duties as citizens. If our democracy is to endure it must recognize as its primary standard of duty the obligation of the individual man and woman to sacrifice themselves for the whole community in time of need."

Instruction is to inculcate high ideals and correct views on the duties of the citizen to the State. The training given is along military lines, but is so conducted as to encourage initiative and individuality, to correct defects and develop natural gifts, and to teach self-control by showing the value of obedience to superior authority.

"The old method of 'breaking the will' by insisting on blind unreasoning obedience to arbitrary rules is replaced by one showing how to use the individual will in attaining the concerted effort known as 'teamwork,' which is the secret of efficiency, and which is dependent upon a conscious and willing obedience to a superior directing authority. Those who learn how to obey it themselves to direct, and by practicing self-control become imbued with the fundamental principle underlying good citizenship."

"This is not a theoretical scheme. It is a practical system carefully worked out by Lieut. E. Z. Steever, U. S. A., and applied with marked success in the public high schools of the State of Wyoming. It has been designated the 'Wyoming Plan.'"

The War College then briefly outlines exactly what the "Wyoming Plan" is, and follows this up with its own general recommendations on the subject. This is what the War College says concerning the system now in force in Wyoming:

RELIEF EXPEDITION AFTER M'MILLAN CABLES FOR HELP

New Yorkers in Arctic War Ship Sent to Their Rescue.

NEW YORK, May 13.—The first word from the MacMillan Cross Land expedition since Sept. 11 reached this city today in two messages to the American Museum of Natural History, sent Wednesday by Thorshavn, Farøe Islands, and signed by Dr. Edmund Otto Hovey, head of the relief expedition, and McMurtry Tanquary, zoologist with the party. The messages tell of the failure of the relief ship Cluett to reach the headquar-

"Cluett failed to reach Etah. Green, Green, Tanquary and myself, with Rasmussen, power boat, returned by Per Freuchen from North Star Bay. Other men all hunting food. Cluett wintering at Snow Bay. Engine disabled. Food supplies inadequate.

The Jarr Family

Written for the Post-Dispatch
By Roy L. McCardell.

Mrs. Jarr Accuses Mr. Jarr of Being "Fussy" About His Clothes.

"WILL you never learn to keep your things in order? Now, look at that drawer!" cried Mrs. Jarr, and she came over to where Mr. Jarr was laboriously selecting a necktie for the day from a very large assortment of cravats that were not good enough to wear and were too good to throw away. The kind you have in quantity.

"Are you going to wear that blue suit again?" she next asked, eyeing him askance.

"Why, I suppose so, seeing I have it on," replied Mr. Jarr.

"Well, it's a sight!" said Mrs. Jarr. "How do you get your clothes in the condition you do? Why don't you wear the gray suit?"

"Where is it?" asked Mr. Jarr spiritlessly.

"It's hanging in your closet. Where else should it be?" was the reply. "Oh, you may look surprised. It wouldn't be in the closet unless I had put it there. You leave everything lying around for me to pick up. One would think I had nothing to do all day long but to follow you around, picking up after you. 'Poor goodness' sake! Get the other suit and don't wear that blue suit again till it's cleaned. It's all spots and it needs pressing!"

Mr. Jarr went over to the closet that was supposed to be for his own apparel exclusively, and fumbled helplessly through a hanging mass of skirts, kid gloves and other confidential garments belonging to Mrs. Jarr.

"I can't find the gray suit, dear," he said, finally.

"Of course you can't find it! You want me to wait on you! Upon my word you give me more trouble than the children!"

Mrs. Jarr then flounced over to the closet and with agile hands and X-ray eyes quickly solved all its mysteries. "Oh, yes," she said, "I remember now. I gave it to a peddler for some enamelware things. You couldn't wear it again."

"It's evident I can't wear it again if the man has it," remarked Mr. Jarr, resignedly.

"Well, it's a good thing somebody got some good out of it. You weren't wearing it, and it was only hanging in the closet attracting moths. Oh, dear! What will I do with the man?"

Mr. Jarr could not solve this everlasting question for his good lady, but was working as expeditiously as he could on himself with the whisk broom. He had done fairly well with himself in front, but his efforts to reach around behind and brush off his own back were pitifully helpless.

"Why don't you go in the hall to brush yourself?" asked Mrs. Jarr. "You are everything full of lint and dust. And how did all that lint get on the back of your trousers?"

"I hung them on the back of the chair last night," replied Mr. Jarr. "Somebody was at them and let them drop on the carpet."

Mrs. Jarr did not pursue the inquiry as to who had been "at them." "Well, do come to breakfast! You keep everything back!" she cried. "I never saw a man so fussy about his clothes!"

The Finish

UP to the last half of the eleventh inning neither side had scored. Several times the bases had been filled, sometimes by the home team and sometimes by the visitors, but on each occasion a snappy double play or the striking out of some batter had put an end to the hopes or fears of the fans.

The girl in blue had sat patiently through it all, murmuring inaudible answers to the excited yells of her escort, clapping her hands when he seemed pleased and trying to look sympathetic when that appeared to be what the occasion called for.

Then, in the last half of the eleventh, Slater lifted one over the left field fence and trotted around the bases amid the plaudits of the multitude.

The girl's escort let out one final "Wow!" grabbed his hat and coat and started for the exit. "Come on," he said. "Let's hurry out and get a car before they're all filled up."

"Is the game over?" asked the girl. And then she wondered why they had to take him away in an ambulance.

At the Old Man's.

A NEWLY married lady was being interviewed by the reporter of the local newspaper just after the ceremony. "And after the honeymoon, where do you intend to settle down?" was his final question. "At the old man's," said the bride, as she hurried away. The reporter thought it sounded unusually familiar, but he decided to use it, so when it appeared in print the report finished up:

"After the honeymoon the happy couple intend to live at the old man's."

THE eighth joke, is that one about there being only seven jokes in the world.

Class Consciousness.

IT was well known in staggering high society, relates Everybody's, that the beautiful Lady Rosemary had never been kissed before; and as, after a long, languorous embrace, the athletic young Duke of Rushmore released his hold, she gazed searchingly into his jowly eyes and questioned:

"And do the poor indulge in this way?"

"Quite frequently, little pet," answered the high personage.

"Well, well, well! And do they experience the same sensations as we do, dear?"

"Absolutely!"

When Greek Meets Greek

TWO business men famous for their acumen and keenness in the marts of trade were wont to meet on the golf links every Saturday afternoon in friendly rivalry. It was known that they did not discard professional ethics in playing the game and they watched one another very closely for infractions of the rules. A ball was driven out of bounds and the driver, after searching for it earnestly, finally gave up, and, slipping a new ball in his trousers, he cautiously let it drop out by his foot and picked it up quickly with a cry of delight.

"Oh, here it is!" he said.

"You're a liar," said his companion, morosely. "I've been standing on it for 15 minutes."

Persons who worry about other people are always saying "Don't worry."

According to Formula.

A TRAMP knocked at a kitchen door and said: "Please, kind lady, I'm a sick man. The doctor gimme this medicine, but I need something to take it with. The lady was ready to help. "Poor fellow!" she said, "do you want a spoon and a glass of water?"

The tramp answered: "No, mum. I wouldn't trouble you. But this medicine haster to be took before meals. Have you got a meal handy?"—Christian Herald.

Lots of persons who spend a great deal of time sympathizing over other folks ought to feel sorry for themselves.

The Other Side.

WHAT do you think of this efficiency business?"

"Oh, I suppose it's a good thing for the fisherman, but it's rather rough on the fish."

The Idea!

WHAT is your husband's name, madam?" asked the directory canvasser.

"John Smith."

"Plain John Smith, eh?"

"No, indeed! John is the handsomest man in Binghamton."

A clean character never needs whitewash.
